Almand Demands Immediate Aid for Fulton Insane

PATIENTS IN JAIL GROWING WORSE, ASSERTS OFFICIAL

Commission's Refusal To Be Responsible for Cases Discharged by Hospital Is Supported.

The condition of the 31 mental patients now in Fulton tower will grow progressively worse due to lack of proper facilities for treating them, Ed L. Almand, chairman of the Fulton county commission, said yesterday in urging immediate admittance of the group to the state hospital at Milledgeville.

Almand's statement came in support of the commission's refusal to accept responsibility for those patients now being discharged from the Milledgeville hospital because of the state's financial dilemma. He described as "pitiable" conditions at Fulton tower "due to failure of the state to accept violent mental cases from Fulton."

He asserted there is no need to allow patients to die for lack of proper medical care, contending "Fulton county is doing the very best it can under the circumstances, but the county jail is not a hospital and is not equipped to care for deranged persons."

Reiterating that Fulton county cannot accept responsibility for released patients, Almand characterized "as passing strange that 350 Fulton county patients should be cured overnight at the state hospital."

"Unless some of these 31 patients now held by Fulton county and which the state will not accept are given specialized treatment soon, they are going to grow progressively worse and there is nothing we can do about it," he said. "There also is danger of their killing or maiming each other. The special guards, in the overcrowded cell blocks in which they

Gallogly's College Chum Tells of Their Fatal Adventures at Hearing

George Harsh tells his story. The companion of Richard Gallogly in the fatal adventures of their college days is shown testifying yesterday at the clemency hearing being conducted for Gallogly. Shown, left to right, are Judge G. A. Johns, of the State Prison and Parole Commission; Governor Rivers, Harsh, Ed Bridges, of the Associated Press; Inman Gray and Stonewall Dyer, counsel for Gallogly. Harsh pleaded for another chance for both.

British Police Shoot Jews Protesting 'Ghetto' Decision

Fire Into Crowd of Demonstrators at Tel Aviv as General Strike Is Mobilized; London Will Turn Pal- estine Over to Arabs.

JERUSALEM, May 17.—(P)—British police fired into a crowd of Jewish youths demonstrating at Tel Aviv tonight against the newly announced British policy governing Palestine, and wounded several of them.

The crowd of more than 5,000 Jewish youths, after taking an oath to fight for Jewish independence, had marched to the British government district offices.

Raising a Zionist flag, they forced their way into the building, broke up the furniture and set fire to desks and tables, police said.

In Air, Then at Crowds.

Police fired first into the air, then as the disorders continued, shot into the crowds.

The demonstrations at Tel Aviv, which is an all-Jewish city, were continuing as midnight approached.

Earlier in London the British government had in a historic pronouncement of policy outlined plans for turning the strife-torn Holy Land over to its Arab majority.

A white paper setting forth Britain's "final plan" indicated Britain was disclaiming five years hence any "obligation to facilitate the further development of the Jewish national home (in Palestine) by immigration."

Under the British solution, Jews will be limited to one-third of the population of the country which Britain now controls under League of Nations mandate.

It was a bitter day for Jews, who have worked for years for a national home in Palestine and a place of refuge there for scores of thousands of their race forced from Germany and other central European states.

Called at Ghetto.

An official statement by the Jewish National Agency for Palestine said the plan "sets up a territorial ghetto for the Jews in their own homeland."

"The Jewish people regard this breach of faith as a surrender to Arab terrorism," said the statement.

"It is the darkest hour of Jewish history that the British government proposes to deprive Jews of their last hope and to close their road back to their homeland."

"The Jews will never accept the closing against them of the gates of Palestine nor let their national home be converted into a ghetto."

"Jewish pioneers who in the past three generations have shown their strength in the upbuilding of a derelict country will from now on display the same strength in defending immigration, the Jewish home and Jewish freedom."

The Jewish statement declared that "it seems only too probable that the Jews would fight rather

W. G. COOPER SR., JOURNALIST, DIES

Associate of Grady and Harris Also Noted as Historian, Civic Leader

Walter G. Cooper Sr., 79-year-old Atlantan, who was widely known throughout Georgia as a journalist, historian and civic and religious leader, died at 8 o'clock last night at a private hospital. He had been in ill health for a long time. He resided at 1143 St. Charles place.

Once the editor of the Atlanta Daily News, which later became the Atlanta Georgian, Mr. Cooper served for a number of years on The Constitution, being associated with Henry Grady and Joel Chandler Harris and other illustrious newspaper men of that era. He was also a reporter on the Journal, and for 17 years—from 1902 to 1919—he was secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.

He was the author of the four-volume History of Georgia and the Official History of Fulton County—both works being studious accounts of the development of the county and state.

Born in Floyd county, near Rome, he was the son of John Frederick and Harriett Smith Cooper, and the grandson of Mark A. Cooper, of Cartersville, who founded the Cooper Iron Works there which before the War Between the States was one of the principal industrial plants of the region.

He was a nephew of the famous "Bill Arp" (Charles A. Smith), the humorist-writer who gained international fame while a member of The Constitution staff.

Worked With Grady.

Mr. Cooper came to Atlanta as a young man and, like his noted relative, became a newspaperman. He acted as stenographer to Henry Grady when that famous editor was producing some of the editorials and speeches that live to this day.

Learning the business of writing rapidly, Mr. Cooper then was a reporter on The Constitution.

Gallogly Is Equally Guilty With Him, Harsh Testifies

However, Prisoner Pleads That Both Be Granted Clem- ency at Hearing; Atlanta's Attorney Reveals Client Was Married Last Friday to Vera Hunt.

George Harsh yesterday coupled an assertion that Richard Gallogly is equally guilty with him of a 1928 slaying with a plea that both be granted clemency.

Harsh, a native of Milwaukee, and Gallogly, member of a prominent Atlanta family, are serving life sentences for the slaying in 1928 of Willard H. Smith, a drug store clerk, in an attempted hold-up. Harsh said they also were guilty of a holdup attempt that resulted in the death of S. H. Meek, grocery clerk, ten days earlier.

Harsh came from the Bellwood prison camp, Fulton county, to appear in a clemency hearing at which it was disclosed Gallogly was married last Friday to a young woman he met six years ago, while serving in prison.

Marriage Revealed.

The announcement of the marriage was made by Gallogly's attorney, Stonewall H. Dyer, of Newman, at the beginning of the day's session of the hearing, being held before Governor Rivers and the state prison and parole board.

Dyer said he obtained a marriage license last Friday morning at Newman and that Gallogly and Miss Vera Hunt were married that afternoon at an Atlanta hospital where Gallogly is under treatment.

Clemency Opposed.

Opposing all efforts to obtain clemency for Gallogly is Solicitor General John A. Boykin, who directed the prosecution of Gallogly and Harsh ten years ago. Boykin produced a continuous stream of witnesses, letters and statements in an effort to show Gallogly has been shown "unprecedented" favoritism while in prison, has at times been belligerent and unruly, has drunk liquor, gambled and used "vile" language.

Each of his contentions was disputed by Dyer, who sought to establish prison life has undermined Gallogly's health, the 29-year-old prisoner has been amply punished for whatever wrong doing.

Quints Have Impish Ideas On How To Greet Royalty

CALLANDER, Ont., May 17.—(UP)—The Dionne quintuplets are clowning so at rehearsals for their presentation to King George VI and Queen Elizabeth that Dr. Allan Roy Dafeo, physician to the quint, emerged from a practice session today with only a doubtful "hope for the best."

Emilie started it by doing a headstand instead of a curtsy. This drew a laugh from the quint's nurses, Molly O'Shaughnessy and Louise Corriveau, and she has been doing it ever since.

Since then, Dr. Dafeo disclosed,

JAPAN WITHDRAWS AS U. S. TARS LAND

Bluejackets and British Marines Back Protest on Incident Off Amoy.

SHANGHAI, May 18.—(Thurs- day)—(P)—Japanese authorities were reliably reported today to have yielded to the demand of American, British and French authorities by withdrawing all but a few troops of their Kulangsu landing party.

The United States Navy landed a patrol on Kulangsu, on the southeast China coast at Amoy, yesterday, while British and French warships moved in close to the island to counter Japanese demands for control of the International Settlement.

American bluejackets and British marines in numbers equal to the Japanese marines remaining in the Settlement were still on patrol for protection of foreign property.

The French cruiser Emile Belin arrived from Hongkong to strengthen a naval force consisting of the United States cruiser Marblehead and four British warships.

British sources said British Vice Admiral Sir Percy Noble delivered an ultimatum to the Japanese last night, refusing to yield, to demands for Japanese control of the Kulangsu municipal council and informing the Japanese that the British would keep naval forces on the island so long as the Japanese remained.

The Japanese withdrew most of their landing party to near-by warships.

Forty-three sailors were landed from the U. S. cruiser Marblehead.

No Word Is Received From Swedish Flyer

STOCKHOLM, May 17.—(P)—Fears for the safety of Charles Backman, Swedish transatlantic flyer, increased tonight as the time passed when his gasoline supply should have been exhausted and no reports were received of his arrival anywhere in northern Europe.

Backman's plane was not equipped with radio and no word of him has been heard since his take-off from Botwood, Newfoundland, early yesterday on an attempted solo hop to Stockholm.

GOSSIP TO ORDER SHOWS HOW TRUTH DIES IN PASSAGE

WASHINGTON, May 17.—(P)—Professor John P. Foley, of George Washington University, in a psychology experiment on hearsay testimony, whispered this sentence to one of his students:

"It is rumored that Marjorie Wells died of acute gastritis." That student whispered it to another, who in turn passed it on to another. Here's the way student No. 21 heard it:

"His roommate has arthritis."

KUHN IS ACCUSED OF TAX DODGING BY MAYOR LAGUARDIA

Dewey Handed Report on Inquiry Charging Bund Leader, Seven Others With Delinquencies.

NEW YORK, May 17.—(P)—In the first attack of its kind made on the pro-Nazi German-American bund here, Mayor LaGuardia tonight turned over to District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey a series of tax-dodging accusations against National Bund Leader Fritz Kuhn and others.

The mayor submitted "for such prosecutive action . . . as you may deem proper," the report of an inquiry made by William B. Herlands, the city commissioner of investigation. In it Kuhn, seven other individuals and four corporations were accused of having been involved in city sales and allied tax delinquencies.

The report did not have the force of a formal criminal charge. Kuhn, president of the German-American Business League, Inc., the German-American Front, Inc., and the A. V. Publishing Corporation, publisher of the bund's organ, "Deutscher Weckruf Und Beobachter," are among those listed in the report.

The Hackl Press, Inc., a printer for the bund and its affiliates, and Fred Hackl, its president, also are included.

The report also disclosed that two bund officials had sailed for Germany since the start of Herlands' investigation—Karl Nicolay, a Brooklyn unit leader, and Fritz Schwieler, business manager of the A. V. Corporation. Schwieler was said to have sailed despite the fact that the State Department had refused to issue a passport pending completion of the inquiry.

The French cruiser Emile Belin arrived from Hongkong to strengthen a naval force consisting of the United States cruiser Marblehead and four British warships.

British sources said British Vice Admiral Sir Percy Noble delivered an ultimatum to the Japanese last night, refusing to yield, to demands for Japanese control of the Kulangsu municipal council and informing the Japanese that the British would keep naval forces on the island so long as the Japanese remained.

CHARM OF QUEEN, RULER'S MODESTY WIN THE PEOPLE

Prime Minister Proclaims 'Affection for Two Young People'; Loyalty to Throne Is Pledged.

QUEBEC, May 17.—(AP)—Canada acclaimed King George and Queen Elizabeth today, upon their arrival for an unprecedented royal tour and then pledged a new loyalty and homage to the British throne and its occupants.

Hour after hour, from early morning until nearly midnight, the King and Queen went through the ritual of state functions, presentations, audiences, addresses and drives through the city.

Fireworks lighted their way tonight as they returned to The Citadel, 160-year-old fortress, to spend the night after a glittering banquet ended the program of their first day on American soil.

The greatest night crowds in Quebec's history roared and cheered as the royal couple left a dinner given by the Quebec government at the Chateau Frontenac.

Push Police Back.

In their eagerness to glimpse their majesties, the spectators jostled and pushed police lines back 20 feet at the gateway to the hotel. Provincial constables solved the problem by lining up a solid row of motorcycles against which the crowds strained.

A light drizzle fell as the royal pair were driven to the hotel between lines of excited spectators and the top of their automobile had been put up, but they could be seen smiling and bowing in the car's interior.

Twenty Received.

As the King and Queen entered the hall, the guests rose and applauded.

During the evening her majesty conversed animatedly with Premier Duplessis of Quebec. At the end they received 20 of the most prominent guests, shaking hands and chatting.

There were no speeches. After the toast to his majesty the guests sang "God Save the King," and later the King and Queen joined them in singing "O Canada."

They leave at 8:30 a. m. (Atlantic time) tomorrow by train for Montreal.

Through the day the informality of the western world was evident despite the military and of-

Association and the Atlanta Real Estate Board—met here today as guests of the Columbus Real Estate Board.

Executive sessions of the boards were held during the morning, after which the groups combined for an informal luncheon at which the Columbus board was host.

The group meetings. The luncheon was presided over by Walter Flournoy, president of the local board.

PARITY OR COST PRICE
FOR COTTON IS URGED

WASHINGTON, May 17.—(UP)—

A measure guaranteeing cotton farmers parity price or cost of production—whichever is higher—was introduced today by Senator Josh Lee, Democrat, Oklahoma.

Under Lee's bill, companion to a measure offered by Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, providing similar benefits for wheat farmers, acreage restrictions would be lifted. Parity price or cost of production would be guaranteed only upon the amount consumed domestically.

British Cabinet Approves
New Concessions to Stalin

London Reportedly Offers To Fight If Moscow Goes to War in Protection of Poland, Rumania, Estonia, Latvia or Finland.

LONDON, May 17.—(P)—The British cabinet was said by informed sources tonight to have approved a new note to Moscow offering important concessions to bring Soviet Russia into the French-British front.

Whether the note has been delivered yet was undisclosed, but Soviet Ambassador Ivan Maisky called at the foreign office and was said to have been told of the British proposals.

One usually well-informed source said the British message would be transmitted to Sir William Seeds, British ambassador to Moscow, tonight for communication to Vyacheslav Molotov, Soviet premier and commissar of foreign affairs.

The foreign office spokesman said "active consultations are in progress" both in London and Moscow, but failed to mention the nature of Britain's new proposals.

The amended suggestions, however, were reported to be an advance toward the Soviet plan for a full military alliance among Britain, France and Russia, and to be designed to meet Moscow's desire for reciprocal commitments.

The new proposal envisages a Russian promise to fight for Poland, Rumania, Estonia, Latvia and Finland. In return, Britain and France would promise to go to Russia's aid if Russia went to war to fulfill these pledges.

Prime Minister Chamberlain faced a barrage of questions in the house of commons on the status of the negotiations with Moscow, but said: "I cannot, at present, give any details."

CENSUS TAKERS ASK "DO YOU FEEL GERMAN?" BERLIN, May 17.—(P)—Nazi Germany today tightened her military defenses and carried out a census which will enable her to increase her control over the lives of her people.

Military precautions were especially in evidence along the "western wall" of fortifications where Chancellor Hitler continued his tour of inspection and at the port of Hamburg.

Various minorities within the greater Reich were deeply concerned in the outcome of the great enumeration of population.

Seven hundred fifty thousand volunteer census takers began an enumeration of the Reich's population in which foreign nationality groups were being asked whether they "feel themselves to be German."

For minority nationalities there was this difficult question to be answered: "Of what 'folkdom' (nationality group) do you feel yourself a part?"

Although the government declared that no pressure was being brought to bear to answer this question one way or another, it was the opinion of observers that many in the minorities will acknowledge German "folkdom."

On the diplomatic front, Denmark cautiously accepted Hitler's offer to negotiate a non-aggression pact, while the ministers of Finland, Sweden and Norway told the Berlin government they did not consider such pacts necessary.

A semi-official German commentary said these three polite "noes" actually were a disavowal of President Roosevelt's intervention of April 14, in which he asked Hitler for pledges of non-aggression against 31 states.

HITLER SAID FOILED
ON COUP IN DANZIG

Duranty Says Poles Forced Britain's Hand in Crisis as Deep as Munich.

By WALTER DURANTY, By the North American Newspaper Alliance.

WARSAW, May 17.—(By Wire)—"You ask why Danzig is the gravest danger-point today. Don't you realize that Europe was just as near war in the period from March 21 to April 6 as in the fortnight before Munich last September?"

This view, expressed by a high-placed foreign observer, is universally held in Warsaw. German Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop had assured his chief neither France nor Britain would raise a finger to halt the Nazi legions.

The night of March 22 had already been chosen for a trial of an anti-aircraft "blackout" in Warsaw. As if by accident, the "blackout" continued on the following night and under cover of that double darkness, the Poles called to the colors more than a quarter of a million trained reservists. The German demands were refused.

ECONOMY PROBERS'
REPORT WILL TOTAL
1,625,000 WORDS

The house economy investigating committee, turning yesterday to preparation of its final report, found a transcript of sworn testimony from its hearing totaling 6,500 pages. The cost of the hearing is estimated at less than $10,000.

James Duggan, official reporter for the committee, estimated the record involves an aggregate of 1,625,000 words.

The committee, authorized under a house resolution adopted January 10, began a legislative investigation of state government costs January 24. Its life was extended on the eve of the legislature's adjournment, March 18, and after a brief holiday the group resumed hearings April 3. The record was closed yesterday as the committee arranged to submit a final report by June 1, the day its authority expires.

Duggan said 56 days had been consumed in actual hearings of sworn testimony.

Rivers and Six Ex-Governors on Same Program

Each Will Tell Bar Conference 'The Importance of the Independent Lawyer in a Democracy.'

Seven Georgia lawyers who have sat in the governor's chair during last administrations but one in the last 25 years will appear on a platform together when the Georgia Bar Association meets in Atlanta on May 25, 26 and 27. Each will air the views that experience has taught him about "The Importance of the Independent Lawyer in a Democracy."

The symposium will be the outstanding feature on the second day of the convention when the 1,200 lawyers who will attend the sessions from all parts of Georgia, will gather at a luncheon at Emory University and then meet in Glenn Memorial auditorium on the university campus for the discussion, starting at 2:30 p. m.

Those on program will be John M. Slaton, Hugh Dorsey, Clifford Walker, Thomas W. Walker, Senator Richard B. Russell and Eugene Talmadge. Governor Rivers will attend.

Judge Augustus M. Roan, of DeKalb county, member of the board of governors of the Georgia Bar Association, will preside at the symposium. As he completed arrangements yesterday, he said:

"I promise there shall be no boring, laudatory introductions for the various speakers as they step up for their part in the program. Each is well-known sufficiently to move along under his own power."

A democracy, Judge Roan points out, thrives on discussion and controversy. "If everyone in America were of one mind on every question, the nation would soon die of inanition."

The independent lawyer, who will be the subject of comment, is described as the type of lawyer who works alone in his profession without having his judgment warped or his activities limited by daily association with corporate or governmental affairs.

Picture of 25 Years. "The men who will participate in the discussion," said Judge Roan, "have led Georgia in its development, and the program should be an interesting revelation on the cross currents of Georgia politics for the last 25 years."

Scott Candler, prominent DeKalb county lawyer and recently elected county commissioner, will welcome the members of the bar to DeKalb county, and Judge James C. Davis, of the Stone Mountain judicial circuit, will extend greetings on behalf of the Stone Mountain circuit.

The women are invited to both the luncheon and the meeting to follow. The plans call for a reception committee, headed by John Wesley Weekes, of Decatur, to meet the guests at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel at noon and from there escort them, by a motorcade led by Sheriff Jake Hall, of DeKalb county, to Emory University. Dean Charles J. Hilkey, of the Lamar School of Law at Emory University, and the members of the senior class will participate in the program. Others on the reception committee include Judge Frank Guess, R. E. Edmondson Jr., Young H. Fraser, Charles D. Hurt, Hugh Burgess, and others. Mrs. Claude Crayton Smith will head a committee consisting of the wives of local lawyers to assist in the entertainment.

GEORGIA LIFE-TERMER RECAPTURED IN MIAMI

MIAMI, Fla., May 17.—(AP)—A 25-year-old red-haired man, whose name was given by Detective Chief L. O. Scarborough as Hubie McConnell, was held for Georgia authorities today as an escaped life-term convict.

Scarboro said the man was convicted of a double murder and was recaptured after an escape from a Soperston, Ga., prison camp last June, only to escape again from a camp north of Atlanta.

"I'm going to get away again," the detective chief quoted McConnell as saying. "I haven't anything to lose, and why should I spend my whole life in jail?"

COAL OPERATORS YIELD IN 3 STATES

'Shoot to Kill' Orders Given in Harlan County, Though.

By The Associated Press. Breaks in the ranks of southern operators holding out against granting the "union shop" to John L. Lewis' CIO miners occurred yesterday in Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia, while in Harlan county, Ky., center of employer resistance, troops protecting mines resistance, troops protecting mines making without union contracts had orders to "shoot to kill, if necessary."

Every national guardsman in Kentucky has orders to be ready to move into the Harlan coal fields, it was announced last night.

The acceptance of a Lewis contract by the Hazard county coal operators, employing about 7,000 men, left only the Harlan operators dissenting in Kentucky.

The Virginia Coal Operators Association yielded to the union, making an agreement which will put about 7,500 miners back to work today.

Meanwhile, at Knoxville, Tenn., southern appalachian operators representing 20 mines in Tennessee and Kentucky likewise signed a union shop contract. About 5,600 men were involved in the agreement.

Secretary of Labor Perkins decided to send a conciliator to troubled Harlan county. In West Virginia, four mines of a United States Steel Corporation subsidiary operated without a union contract.

Commercial operators and Alabama coal miners appeared closer yesterday in negotiating a new contract, with inclusion of penalties for "wildcat" strikes in a union proposal which previously demanded the "union shop."

Planning on Being Married Soon? Here's Timely Advice by Expert

Emory Sociologist Warns Against Haste; Prime Requisites Are Likeness of Tastes, Interests and Previous Backgrounds; Pitfalls Pointed Out.

By LUKE GREENE.

While prospective June brides shopped for their trousseaus and potential husbands worked themselves into a dither over the thought of walking down the church aisle and saying, "I do," Dr. Hugh N. Fuller, Emory University sociologist, took time from his regular duties yesterday to give a few tips on making marriage successful.

Cupid is slated to have a banner year this June. Ever since Old Man 1938 marched off with his scythe and the Infant 1939 took up his duties, wedding bells have been ringing a merry tune. And the matrimonial forecasters predict that one of the greatest crops of June brides in many years will do their wedding gowns this year and trip lightly to the tune of "Here Comes the Bride."

Warns Against Haste.

Taking this expected boom into consideration, Dr. Fuller issued a timely warning against haste. He said it was much easier to do a little thinking beforehand than to "marry in haste and repent at leisure."

"Don't be too much swayed by romance," he advised. "Marriage is not all wedding bells and June roses. It lasts a long time. There are bills to be paid, sickness to be endured, and children to think of. No sir, it's nothing to rush into."

One of Dr. Fuller's prerequisites for marriage is likeness of tastes, interests and background on the part of both boy and girl. He doesn't preach any of this "opposites attract" doctrine.

Against Long Engagements.

As for engagements, Dr. Fuller doesn't recommend long ones. He has no specific length of time the boy and girl should know each other before they yield to the influence of Cupid. However, he says they should go together long enough to become acquainted with each other's likes and dislikes.

The late twenties—between 25 and 28—seem to be the most appropriate ages for marriage, the sociologist declared.

When it comes to income, Dr. Fuller blasts the often-quoted adage that two can live as cheaply as one. It can't be done, he says. The income, he explained, should be based on what the couple has been accustomed to. There should not be a tremendous drop in the standard of living, he declared.

Handle Love With Care.

Likeness of religious beliefs are not as important as is sometimes believed, Dr. Fuller indicated. He said if the religions of the boy and girl were so different that they caused differences of background in early youth he could not recommend marriage on this basis.

And Mr. Prospective Husband, beware of leaving the top off the toothpaste. Little irritations like this frequently bring about serious misunderstandings that might lead to divorce, Dr. Fuller said.

"Initial understanding of each other's status and needs should prevent such family rifts," the sociologist declared.

Dr. Fuller admits he has no all-inclusive definition of love but explains that it is the key to a lifetime of happiness and should be handled with care.

BILL WOULD PROBE RINGLING BEQUEST

Florida Is Chief Beneficiary of Circus Magnate.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 17.—(AP)—A suit in Sarasota county court and a bill in the house of representatives today sought investigation of the $23,000,000 Ringling estate in which the state of Florida is major beneficiary.

The suit, filed by the attorney general's office, demanded proof that assets of the estate had not been withdrawn by John Ringling North, nephew of Circuit Magnate John Ringling and administrator of the holdings he bequeathed to the state. The court ordered North to reply later in the month.

The bill in the legislature would require an audit of the estate. It was referred to committee.

MAN SEIZED IN OHIO IN POISON SLAYINGS

Post-Mortems Started on Two Bodies Believed Victims of Ring.

PHILADELPHIA, May 17.—(AP)—A search for missing principals and important figures in the east's murder-for-insurance syndicate swung quickly through three states today and scored an arrest in Ohio.

At the same time, coroner's physicians began post mortem examinations on the bodies of two men investigators believe were among 100 victims of the vast racket.

Assistant District Attorney Vincent P. McDermott announced that hearings for new suspects would be held soon. More than a score are in custody.

McDermott said he will ask tomorrow or Friday for murder indictments against at least half-a-dozen alleged principals, including widows of some known victims of the plots. Group trials are scheduled to begin Monday.

The latest arrest in the widespread investigation was by Cleveland police. They held Dominic Rodio, 51, of Philadelphia.

BRITISH SEEK HALT TO CASH OUTFLOW

English Stockholders To Discourage Sale of U. S. Securities.

LONDON, May 17.—(AP)—English stockholders, following the government's plea against further outflow of capital, today agreed to attempt to discourage British investors from buying United States and other foreign securities.

At the request of the Bank of England, which asked they assist in blocking the outflow of funds, they decided to cease quoting or recommending dollar investments, and to reserve the right to refuse orders for the purchase of dollar stocks and bonds and to urge investors not to export their capital.

(New York brokerage houses with branches in London were advised today that London offices were co-operating with the Bank of England's request.)

DECISION REACHED ON RAIL DISCOUNTS

$100,230 Goes to State, County Institutions.

A discount payment of $100,230, obtained recently by Georgia from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in disposal of Western & Atlantic Railroad rental warrants, must be divided between the state eleemosynary institutions and the counties, Attorney General Ellis Arnall ruled yesterday.

In a letter to Governor Rivers the attorney general said the law authorizing discount of the rentals requires all proceeds to be distributed in shares.

He listed these as 37 per cent to state welfare department for construction and repair of institutions; 3 per cent to the department of education for Cave Spring School for the Deaf; 10 per cent to the health department for the state tubercular hospital at Alto and 50 per cent divided equally among the 159 counties.

Dixie Governors To Confer On Wage-Hour Amendments

Rivers Calls Group To Meet
Saturday in Memphis To Study Proposals.

Proposals pending in congress to amend the wage-hour act, which were termed matters of concern to southern business interests, will be discussed in a special session of the Southern Governors' Conference opening Saturday in Memphis, it was announced yesterday by Governor Rivers, chairman of the body, which was recently enlarged to include Texas and Oklahoma in addition to the southeastern states.

"Businessmen, agriculturalists and industrialists in the south are perturbed over several amendments," the Governor declared. "These amendments will be considered and explained, and the southern governors will take a definite stand on each one. This stand will be communicated to our congressional delegations before the proposals come up for final action."

Seven Accept Invitations. The specific nature of the amendments causing concern was not known to the Georgia chief executive. He said officials who understood them thoroughly and their effect would explain them at the Memphis meet.

Telegraphic acceptances from governors or their representatives have been received from Oklahoma, Arkansas, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee.

The session was called upon

MISS RAMSPECK TO PLAY LEAD IN CAPITAL COMEDY

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Miss Dorothy Ramspeck, daughter of Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, is cast in a lead part of "Take Two for One," a comedy to be staged here tomorrow night.

Among the audience will be Mr. and Mrs. Ramspeck and the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castilla Najera, whose daughter, Senorita Castilla Najera, will co-star with Miss Ramspeck.

The comedy is an amateur performance given under the auspices of the Misses Ramspeck and Najera's school.

A suggestion of Governor Frank Dixon, of Alabama.

Although the conference campaign for parity freight rates was not specifically on the program, Governor Rivers said he was sure it would be discussed.

Rail Rates Cited.

On February 27, Commissioner William E. Lee and Examiner Michael T. Corcoran reported to the Interstate Commerce Commission that rates on 13 commodity groups were "unduly prejudicial" to southern producing points "to the extent such rates are upon levels higher than at present in effect on like articles within the north."

The report said there was no substantial argument why the rate level for a given commodity shipped from a southern to a northern point should be higher than the level of rates between two northern points of equal distance.

The articles on which the report said rates were "unduly prejudicial" were: Stoves, stone, plumbers' goods, cast iron pipe fittings, cast iron service boxes, iron body valves, fire hydrants, brass pipe fittings, brass cocks and valves, soapstone and talc, excelsior, paperwares (paper goods) and chinaware.

Rates Labeled "Unreasonable." The report also labeled the rates on most of these articles "unreasonable."

Leaders in the Southern Governors' Conference immediately hailed the report as a victory in their fight for elimination of freight rate differentials between the north and south.

On May 1, northern interests filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission exceptions to the report.

Reply Planned. Edgar Watkins, of Atlanta, general counsel for the governors' conference, said he would file a reply to the exceptions in Washington Saturday.

"On June 1," he said, "exceptions and our brief replying to them will be argued orally before the Interstate Commerce Commission."

He said he planned to explain phases of the legal fight at the Memphis meeting.

LINDY SAYS NATION TRAILS EUROPE IN MILITARY AVIATION

Asks Increased Research To Regain Lost Ground; Informs House Group of Foreign Air Activity.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—(AP)—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh told a house committee today the United States was lagging behind European nations in military aviation developments and urged increased research in this country to recover the lost ground.

Lindbergh appeared at a carefully guarded session of the house appropriations subcommittee, which is considering increased appropriations of $300,000,000 for the army, including $250,000,000 to complete the proposed expansion of the air corps to 5,500 planes.

The famous flyer gave the committee considerable information, members said, concerning the activities of European powers in the field of military aviation and supported the War Department's plans to meet the situation.

Official character of the events. This appeared to be enhanced by the charm and the manner of Queen Elizabeth, who won feminine favor, by the modest demeanor of the King and by what Canadian Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King called the "qualities of heart and character" possessed by the visitors.

"Greater than our sense of the splendor of your state," he said at the official government luncheon, "is our affection for two young people who bear, in so high a spirit, a responsibility unparalleled in the world."

A Great Welcome.

Quebec gave the British sovereigns a great welcome, although one different from the massed demonstrations of London's teeming millions and different from the spectacular show of a Broadway ticker tape reception in New York.

The setting of the scene was too vast for that. All Quebec, and thousands of visitors, saw the white liner Empress of Australia round the bend of the river this morning with colors flying and move into Wolfe's cove, but the

REWARD OFFERED FOR MISSING GIRL; FBI IS INFORMED

The mother of 13-year-old Jessica Whiteman yesterday offered a $50 reward for information which may lead to her missing daughter.

The mother, Mrs. Joseph W. Whiteman, of 286 Hasty place, Grove Park, expressed the belief her daughter and a companion, Mary Ruth Hawkins, also 13, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Hawkins, of 321 West Lake avenue, N. W., were abducted.

The girls, both students at West Fulton High school, have been missing since May 9. Mrs. Whiteman said she believed the girls were forced into a car and taken away.

Names of the girls were sent to Washington offices of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

crowds merely dotted the great bluffs.

In a lifetime few Londoners see their King and Queen with such freedom and ease as Quebec saw them today in spite of the tightness of the program that visitors had but few minutes rest between functions and Queen Elizabeth wore the same outfit from breakfast through to dinner where she appeared in her evening costume.

Speaks in Two Tongues.

The King rushed out of his admiral's uniform and hat for luncheon, appearing in formal morning attire of a tunic and white tie for the occasion of the first address a British King ever made on North American soil.

"I realize that this moment is historic," he said. Enunciating each word slowly and distinctly, he addressed the first part of his speech to Prime Minister Mackenzie King in English and concluded in French for Quebec's French Canadians.

The luncheon party of nearly 300 guests at the Chateau Frontenac gave him an ovation when he sat down.

From the Hon. R. Dandurand, leader of the Canadian government forces in the Ottawa senate, to whom the French part of the address was made, came the exclamation "Vive le roi"—"long live the king"—and much gesticulation of approval that was not Anglo-Saxon.

25,000 Children Sing.

The significant point of the King's address was his tribute to North America where, he said, in the last two centuries "through loss and through gain, the British commonwealth of nations has been largely moulded into its present form."

In a great popular demonstration at Battlefield park, after the luncheon, 25,000 massed school children sang "God Save the King" in French. This was on the plains of Abraham where Wolfe fell in the battle in 1759 which made Canada a part of the British empire.

Historic Photo—First British King To Visit Canada

Refreshed after their first night's sleep aboard the Empress of Australia without the throb of the ship's giant turbines, King George and Queen Elizabeth are shown leaving their 11-day home in the company of Prime Minister Mackenzie King, hat in hand. The King is wearing an admiral's uniform and her majesty is gowned in an all-gray ensemble.

The elements which delayed the royal ship two days on the trans-Atlantic passage smiled warmly yesterday as the first British King and his consort set foot upon Canadian soil. Here is shown a portion of the crowd which lined the streets as the couple motored to a reception. The people were particularly impressed with the King's modesty and Queen's charm.

DEATH OF PALMER TERMED 'NATURAL'

Dr. Kennedy Testifies External Injuries Did Not Kill Chicagoan.

SARASOTA, Fla., May 17.—(AP)—Dr. David R. Kennedy testified today that Potter D'Orsay Palmer died "from natural causes and not from any external injuries," and Assistant State Attorney W. M. Smiley said later the inquiry into the Chicago heir's death was closed.

The 34-year-old playboy died at a hospital Monday. At the opening session of the inquest yesterday Assistant State Attorney W. M. Smiley reported the autopsy had not borne out "natural theory."

Peace Justice Franklin Redd Jr. reconvened the jury late today and Dr. Kennedy reported the natural death finding but added the final results of the post mortem would not be available for several days.

In response to a question from Redd, he said, "it's possible" Palmer died of a streptococcus infection.

Redd adjourned the inquest after hearing Dr. Kennedy and indicated he would reconvene the jurors probably in two or three days.

Although Redd had said today's testimony did not answer all the questions, he indicated he would accept the final finding by the doctors without further calling of witnesses.

Royal Tour 'The Royal Torture'?

---George and Elizabeth Think Not

Smiling Monarchs Show No Signs of Discomfort in First Crowded Day Spent in Strange Surroundings of Their Own Realm.

QUEBEC, May 17.—(AP)—Already the British royal tour in America has been called "the royal torture," but not by King George and Queen Elizabeth.

Smiling, good-natured healthy-looking normal persons, they showed no signs of torture or even discomfort this first day of crowded function in new and strange surroundings of their own realm.

So good was the King's appetite for luncheon, his first meal ashore that, like a hungry schoolboy, he started eating his specially prepared toast, with a bit of butter spread on it, almost at the moment he sat in his chair.

It wouldn't have been so noticeable, but there was a delay in bringing the first course of mutton and there in the great gathering was the sovereign the only person in the whole place with anything to eat. And he proceeded to eat.

King George had not only special toast but special scarlet-coated footmen, brought all the way from Buckingham palace to serve it.

When the sovereigns entered, the invited company stood, a hidden orchestra played "God Save the King," and a moment later the King's servant placed a rack of toast before him.

The ritual of the serving of the King and Queen was new to Canada. Each Buckingham palace footman, a towering, soldier-like figure, stood like a sentinel behind the chair occupied by the King and Queen.

Special waiters brought them food, wine, dishes, but only the footmen served the sovereign. In unison, as if drilled, they moved together to the left side of the King and Queen, their right arms smartly crooked behind them, and leaning far over offered the courses.

2,000 Snowbirds Served to Royalty

QUEBEC, May 17.—(Canadian Press).—The 400 Quebec notables who attended the royal banquet tonight sat down to a masterpiece of culinary planning that included a "snowbird salad," created from the breasts of more than 2,000 snowbirds trapped on the Isle of Orleans, sealed in aspic, based on pate de foie gras and topped by truffles. Caviar was carried into the banquet hall in ice containers shaped like crowns.

The King and Queen, possibly tired after a heavy day, ate sparingly of the menu; it consisted of:

Caviar.
Chicken consommé montmorency.
Laurentide trout with white wine.
Quebec lamb crown.
Champagne sherbet.
Breasts of Island of Orleans snowbirds.
French salad.
Strawberry cup with whipped cream.
Fancy biscuits.
Fruit basket.
Coffee.

Rare vintage wines were served. First there was amontillado sherry, then cavalier montmorency, hospice de beaume, chateau haut brion, grand fin champagne and Napoleon brandy.

to protect United States interests in the small island settlement.

Kulungu, in which the United States and Britain are the chief foreign powers concerned, is the first International Settlement to be invaded in the Japanese-Chinese war, now nearly two years old.

In London the Japanese embassy disclosed that the Japanese forces of occupation at Kulungu International Settlement had requested replacement of its occidental officials by Japanese.

Tension developed immediately with the Japanese occupation last Friday, which was carried out with the explanation that the life of the Japanese naval commander had been endangered by an incident in which a Chinese was killed. The tension increased with subsequent Japanese demands for control of the settlement and Japanese rejection yesterday of a demand by the settlement's municipal council that the occupying marines withdraw.

Simulated Air Raids Feature
Maneuvers by Fort Benning Forces.

COLUMBUS, Ga., May 17.—(AP) Mythical war planes attempted to shower mythical bombs upon this west Georgia city of upward of 50,000 inhabitants today.

The aerial maneuvers were part of an "enemy" attack on defending forces around Columbus, which fought delaying actions with artillery and light tanks.

Brigadier General Robert O. Van Horn, commanded the Eighth brigade in its tactical encounter with the defending forces, comprising the Twenty-second infantry regiment commanded by Colonel Simon Buckner and the Eighth, commanded by Colonel John J. Fulmer.

Defense of Columbus against the simulated air raids was part of the general problem intended to train officers in the practical problems of handling troops under war conditions.

The fighting was somewhat in the nature of preparation for the arrival tomorrow of Major General Embick, commander of the fourth corps area. He will observe the corps area maneuver occupying the last two days of the training period.

It Seems Illogical

The attitude of Fulton county authorities in respect to cured patients or harmless insane persons sent back to this county from the state mental hospital at Milledgeville seems to be without basis of logic. It is, of course, an effort on the part of the county to avoid a few additional dollars of outlay, understandable in the county's perpetual paucity of financial resources as compared with desired expenditures.

Certainly, however, it is unreasonable to expect the state, suffering under its own money stringency, to accept unnecessary responsibility for citizens of this county.

It is well known to everyone in Georgia that the hospital at Milledgeville has been dangerously overcrowded for years. Planned to accommodate 5,000 as a maximum, it has struggled to care for 7,000 or more patients. It is now weeding out from these those who are either cured of their mental disabilities or who are harmless and perfectly safe to mingle in free society. By so doing, the hospital hopes not only to reduce its patient personnel to safer totals, but also to make room for many violently and dangerously insane persons who are now, perforce, kept in the county jails because there is no room for them at the hospital. Fulton has a number of these is the tower.

This is, evidently, an intelligent and wise program. Yet Fulton county seeks to avoid the responsibility of providing for those few of the returned patients who cannot go back to their families. It is, surely, a part of the problem of county welfare and, among the varied agencies of social welfare that operate here, surely one could be found which should, rightfully, assume this responsibility.

The attempted refusal of the county to accept these returned patients provides a glaring example of failure to co-operate between the different governmental units in Georgia. It is just such failure which is responsible for many of the state's present problems and until a more co-operative attitude is adopted it is unlikely any permanent solution for any of the pressing questions will be found.

It is, too, unfair and inhuman in its inferences toward the individuals involved. Fulton county says that these restored patients, in effect, that in so far as it is concerned, officially, they can never be cured. The county assumes that any individual, once adjudged insane, must forever remain in that status. It would close the door of hope and deny there is cure for mental diseases.

For, of those returned, many are pronounced, by competent alienists, to be completely cured. Yet the county would tell these they cannot return to normal life, in the community of their former residence, but must forever stay as patients in an institution for the insane, doomed to a lifetime among the mentally sick, with death as the only avenue to release.

An Atlanta Disgrace

Probably the most necessary expenditure in Atlanta today is requested in city council and embodied in the resolution asking the finance committee to find $75,000 for the repair of streets.

The condition of these streets is nothing short of disgraceful. Neglect over years has brought them to a state bordering upon disintegration, requiring immediate steps to correct the conditions that are today forcing Atlantans to pay a staggering toll in automobile repairs and rapid car depreciation.

It is true a bond issue should be provided for the long-term program of street improvements, but in the meantime it is imperative the present disgraceful condition be remedied. It is doubtful whether any city in the country can claim worse streets than Atlanta, with gaping holes an actual threat to life, costly in racked automobile bodies, broken springs and axles. If the total damage cost were possible of compilation it would be found staggering. It is a cost paid by every Atlanta car owner now paying taxes for decent streets upon which to ride in safety and comfort.

The city is not alone in its neglect of major streets, the county having been equally remiss in many cases despite the fact county roads are generally newer and less heavily traveled. Piedmont road, a rank disgrace even within city limits, is in even worse condition in some spots beyond the city line. Some stretches of Peachtree road are in similar state, notably along the street car tracks where the danger is greatest. Within the city, the few streets that remain in decent condition are being greatly overtaxed and will in turn be susceptible to more rapid disintegration. This forces a load that is responsible in no small part for the slowing down of the traffic flow.

It is the duty of council to insist that the finance committee find the necessary money for street repairs, and that this fund be used where the need is greatest—without regard to ward boundaries.

The Right Man

A sportsman believed acceptable to hunters, fishermen and farmers of Georgia has been obtained by Governor Rivers to reorganize the State Wild Life Department.

He is Clint Davis, public relations director of the United States Forest Service and he is being loaned by the government to the state of Georgia for one month. During the period from June 1 to July 1 Davis hopes, with the aid of a citizens' commission and sportsmen generally, to work out a feasible plan for the future operation of this adjunct of the natural resources division.

Most important task facing Davis is to encourage revenue from fishing licenses and appoint a group of 25 game and fish protectors. These protectors are to be selected on a merit system basis.

As temporary head of the Wild Life Department, Davis appears to have all the qualifications necessary for effecting a sound reorganization.

He has been one of the outstanding leaders in conservation work during the past six years. He served two years in the State Wild Life Department in 1935-36 before going with the United States Forest Service as director of public relations, a post he has held for the past three years.

Forest Service officials say he has proven a valuable addition to this outstanding federal organization. Working with State Wild Life and forestry officials in 12 southern states has given him an excellent opportunity to observe and study the methods most beneficial to his native state.

Davis is recognized as a tireless worker, a true conservationist and is popular with hunters, fishermen and landowners with whom he has a wide acquaintance over the state.

Progress he is able to make in the month he has been allotted for reorganizing a department which has been on a steady decline for more than a year is expected to determine whether or not he will listen to proposals to become permanent head of the division.

He will need complete co-operation of state sportsmen to make satisfactory progress in so short a period.

An Old One Folds Up

There will be many a sigh among old timers at the news that Scribner's magazine, after a vain attempt at becoming modernized, mailed out the May number and went out of business—at least temporarily.

Scribner's was founded in 1887. It was clothed in a rather plain, yellowish cover designed by the well-known American architect, Stanford White, who was shot to death in the early part of the century by Harry K. Thaw. It wore this plain dress until 1928, when the urge to "go modern" began taking hold of everything in sight. Many of the old subscribers regretted this attempt to revamp the magazine—to change it from the old literary medium to a semi-up-to-the-minute slick. They now attribute its downfall to these early attempts at streamlining.

The magazine became known for its literary discoveries. It published Richard Harding Davis' famous short story "Galleger," Bret Harte's "A Drift From Redwood Camp" and Stephen Crane's "The Open Boat." It was the first magazine to print a short story by Ernest Hemingway—"The Killers"—introducing his conversational style. Thomas Wolfe's "An Angle on the Porch" was also among its firsts.

About a year and a half ago Scribner's, under new management, tried to streamline in a big way. It succeeded in becoming nothing more than a cross between a not-any-too-literary medium and a popular appeal slicker—with accent on the popular appeal. An attempt to boost the circulation to 350,000—an unheard-of figure for a literary magazine—failed dismally. In the attempt it lost its reputation as a literary medium. Old subscribers didn't like it and dropped out. It wasn't hot enough for the new ones.

So Scribner's, one of the old ones and one of the really good ones, in its day, folded up with the May number and quit. There was insufficient cash on hand, according to news reports, to pay for another issue.

Poland says the next move is Germany's, and Germany says it's Poland's. Hold it, boys! This may be the solution.

A few more handouts by congress to the farmer, and the bandits will lay off banks to concentrate on R. F. D. mail boxes.

Some of the better ball teams are off to poor starts. On days when the hitters are hitting, the pitcher eats the wrong breakfast food.

Somewhere, congress has picked up the fallacy that, if it made both ends meet, it would have a vicious circle.

Editorial of the Day

TARDIEU UNRECONCILED

(From The Memphis Commercial Appeal.)

Former Premier Andre Tardieu, the last survivor of the French delegates to the Versailles conference, has addressed an open letter to Adolf Hitler of Germany that shows the writer unreconciled. Tardieu says in effect that Hitler's present performance shows the terms of the treaty ending the World War were not harsh enough and he warns that even harder terms will be enforced if Germany is conquered in another war.

It may be argued that the theory of an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth has worked none so well in the centuries it has been tried only to produce one devastating conflict after another. Tardieu may be properly classified as the exponent of a feudal system of thought and action. It is well for all concerned, however, to understand that M. Tardieu speaks not for himself alone, but for many others on both sides of the current controversy. War would release those forces again and they probably would find even more ample employment than in 1918 and following.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

PERMANENT INQUISITORS? WASHINGTON, May 17.—There's an idea afloat in the administration that the monopoly committee ought to be transformed into a permanent investigating agency, equipped to examine and report on new economic phenomena as they appear. As now constituted, the committee has proved disappointing, partly because it is tackling too big a subject in too short a time, and partly because most of its inquiries are being made after the event. It's thought that a permanent body, properly staffed, with a properly scientific approach to economic problems, might really get results.

If the idea comes to anything, the new agency will probably take the form of an interdepartmental commission, including representatives of the Treasury, Justice, Commerce and Labor departments, the Federal Reserve Board, the Federal Trade Commission and the SEC. The members of the commission would supervise policy, while the commission staff would do the real work.

In effect, a force of economic G-men, to explore the dreadfully puzzling failures of our economy, is what is contemplated. At the same time, there is no desire for a continuous witch hunt. It is thought that, if anything, the new agency should work more quietly and privately than the present monopoly committee, whose disclosures, heaven knows, have been unsensational enough. Information for the President and high officials of the government is as much the object as information for the public at large, although the public would also be kept informed of the new agency's findings.

TWO HOPES The new idea, to be sure, is only floating in the New Deal air. Many of the administration economists and others naturally interested have discussed it. It may soon find a sponsor, but, even if it does, it must be presented to a balky congress. In fact, it is chiefly interesting as another symptom of the state of mind of the New Deal.

The monopoly committee itself, this such a symptom. In essence, it was set up for two reasons. First, the New Dealers were far from sure that they had the key to the economic riddle, and hoped to find it by a broad search. And, second, they hoped that by "dramatizing the concentration of economic power" they would explain the New Deal's purposes to the people, and so strengthen the New Deal's political position. Thus far, the committee has not lived up to either hope.

It may still do so, for the central problem of idle men and idle money—of 10,000,000 unemployed and billions of capital also unemployed—has just been taken up. The signs are that the problem will be dealt with in a sane manner, without any prejudice either for or against business. Indeed, it's most significant how often the opinion is heard around Washington now that the investment banking business, once the New Deal's public enemy No. 1, really deserves more freedom. Probably, if the attack, they would explain the New Deal's political position. Thus far, the committee has not lived up to either hope.

PEOPLE'S CONFIDENCE The young SEC official, Peter Nehemkis, and the economist, Stuart Chase, have planned the present hearings between them. They have tried to arrange presentation of their evidence in a simple, understandable manner. They are calling to the stand such men as George Whitney, Owen D. Young, Wendell L. Willkie and Joseph P. Pew. Business will tell its story in its own way, at the same time that the story's other side is told.

All this evidence that the committee is doing its best, just as, no doubt, the permanent investigative agency would also do its best. Nevertheless, it is hard to hope for real results in the near future. While men remain idle and money remains idle, the same old, cloying remedies are constantly proposed. The businessmen, say, "flicking remedies" are constantly proposed. The businessmen, say, "flicking remedies" are constantly proposed. The businessmen, say, "flicking remedies" are constantly proposed.

Unfortunately, the businessmen's remedy was tried, almost without interruption, from the close of the World War until 1933. The New Dealers' remedy has been tried, almost without interruption, since 1933. And we are no better off. Either the answer lies in between, or it has not been given at all. Everyone agrees that it had better be discovered soon, if the confidence of the people (so much more important than that of businessmen) is not to be destroyed for good.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

There was a man
In our town
Who made a lot of dough,
But how to live
Contentedly
Was art he didn't know.

And so his life
Was woeiful,
Without a day of peace;
He worried lest
He lose his wealth
And sought, always, increase.

Take Me Out
To the Ball Game.

Although it was never my lot in life to join in baseball games as a boy, although I have never roamed a sandlot, and although I never was much of a pitcher's mound, there are few recreations I enjoy more than sitting in the grandstand and watching our Crackers defeat the dastardly foe.

When life was young for me, it was soccer football and cricket that demanded my participation. Never was much good at cricket, though it is a game fascinating to watch. Though you should, really, play it for four years and study it for another four to appreciate all the finer points.

Was better at soccer, at school, and still hanker to see a good game, occasionally.

But have acquired, through the years on this side of the pond, the taste for baseball watching. Even in that, however, I'm still different, in one or two ways, from the average American fan.

For instance, I can't get interested in any other teams than the Crackers nor in the standings of other leagues than the Southern. Strictly a loyal supporter of the home boys, that's me.

I don't know the names of more than a few players in the major leagues and these are mostly fellows who used to cavort in home uniforms at Ponce de Leon. The only out-of-town box scores I look at are those of Brooklyn, just to see if my friend and neighbor, Fred Singler, broke into the lineup.

It is a matter of no moment whether the Yankees win or whether the American League pennant or whether the Athletics stay at the bottom of that league forever.

Another Difference.

Then, even at Ponce de Leon, I never get vocal in enthusiasm. You don't hear me yelling, no matter what happens, and I've yet to shout "robber" at my first umpire.

No, what I like is to sit quietly, with perhaps occasional side comment to my companions, and enjoy the game in silent communion. I stand up, sometimes, to see over the standing crowd in front of me when there's a long hit to the outfield and I always join in the seventh-inning stretch. These, other than an average of one call a game for the game in silent communion.

As I said, I like to see the Crackers win. That is the purpose of the game, isn't it? Paul Richards and his noble lads can get twenty games ahead of the team in second place as quickly as it can mathematically be done, and it will suit me. I'm not one to grow blasé at too much success.

Pitchers' Battles.

Provided the Crackers win, I enjoy a close pitcher's battle better than a free-hitting game with home runs and three-baggers galore.

My favorite players this year? Well, there's that lad Peters, at short. He probably ranks first in my private estimation. Seems to me he's the spark plug of the entire infield. And his hitting is sweet, too, this year. I like to see a batter trying, even if he does go down swinging now and then.

Then there's Mallico. He's likeable and a fast runner. He seems to be getting a lot of fun out of the game. Did you ever see him without a grin? Even when the umpire calls a raw strike on him? They do say he cusses the umps in French, when he's real mad, but always with that pleasant smile on his face.

And Slugg Richards himself. He's a grand catcher. Like to see him catch a man off first. And I hope they keep Rucker in the lineup. I've confidence that youngster will begin to climb in the batting average before very long.

Of the pitchers I'm partial to the youngster Onnie Robinson, to Stein and Miller and Johnson. And, of course, to Bobby Durham for a couple of innings, anytime.

Well, that's all the column permits. No space to recall my favorite memory—the final week of the 1913 season.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Monday, May 18, 1914:

"Following the adoption of the resolution increasing the pay of Atlanta women school teachers by the general council, the school board will be urged at its next meeting to prepare the June budget so that the increase can be set on January 1, 1915, in accordance with the resolution."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From the news columns of Saturday, May 18, 1889:

"William Kemmler, convicted of murder, is the first to be executed under the new law of New York state, which requires that electricity shall take the place of the gallows."

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Shifting NEW YORK, May 17.—Everywhere I roam in the United States there is evidence in the dilapidation of old homes that, if wealth does tend to concentrate in the possession of a small group of people, then that group itself is like a golf ball in that the membership is always changing. The old ones die off or go broke and quietly vanish, and the heirs of those who did not go broke, on coming into the money, take second or third cut after the taxes have been collected and, dividing it among them, find that individually they are unable to maintain the old mansions of the best families.

Some of the heirs are fools who lose their money in silly investments, a good many are drunkards and even go to marrying frequently and on slight provocation—an expensive way of doing, what with legal expenses, alienation settlements and all—and some are just average persons who stretch out their money until they die, when it is taxed again, and that remainder, in turn, is divided among several in diminishing portions.

If an heir does not possess the knack of making money to add to his inheritance, then the process is like the chuckluck hotel, which skims and skims until there is nothing left to raise a skim. Fortunes lack stamina, and the new-rich are always rising.

In All Our Cities

All American cities—and a hundred years will cover the age of many of them—have overwhelmed and obliterated in their physical growth whole rows of old mansions where once abode the rich men of an earlier day, and many buildings now masked and jizzed up with hotel fronts or store fronts were palaces not so long ago in which the banker or the street car magnate lived on rich meats and heavy gravies.

Anyone who is rising 40 years, on revisiting a city after an absence of 20 years or 25, will notice the total disappearance of blocks which in his youth gave him an impression of impregnable riches and permanence and the transformation of others into tin stores, kitchenette apartments and palmists' studios.

It is true, of course, that some of the rich and well-to-do have moved into the suburbs to occupy imitation English or God-awful Spanish dwellings with plate glass show streets but very little room for books, on grounds from which the milkman of 30 years ago retreated at a decent profit on his acreage, but a majority of those estate owners are lately come into money and many of them are house poor.

Division Come 1960, when the elders are thinned out, the young ones in prep or college today will be the heirs of their parents at the leaving of their estates, married and moved away, and the wealth of the suburb, if wealth it be, will be concentrated no more.

In New York in 20 years, Fifth avenue, which once meant society and riches, has been transformed into a street of shops and business below the park, and to the north of Fifty-ninth street has become a mixture of old homes, many of them apparently worked only by skeleton crews like laid-off ships, and co-operative apartment buildings where the rich and the poor are mixed together in a haphazard way, and the heirs to a town house ten floors up may discover that they have inherited only an error.

Haunted Newport, R. I., is haunted, and every inland city has its miscellany of the boomtime big shot who joined the polo club and flew his own plane but jumped out of a window and barely beat the rap in a criminal action and tossed his cuff links and his wife's pearls into the blanket to stand off the creditors.

The story can be read in the names of those who constitute the society in any city, for the names of the old rich families are rarely represented and the names which do appear were found only in the births, marriages and deaths and in the humber brackets of the pay rolls 40 years ago.

Old Indian Town.

Excavations on the site of the big Indian town of Patowomeke, scene of the kidnapping of Pocahontas by the English in 1612, are now being carried on by Smithsonian Institution anthropologists. It is on the Virginia bank of the Potomac river in Stafford county, about ten miles from the present county seat and on almost the exact site of the colonial town of Marlborough, all traces of which have long since disappeared. The site has been identified from a map made by Captain John Smith who first visited the Indian settlement in 1608.

Smith described the place as containing from 160 to 200 aboriginal men. This means that it must have had a population of about 1,000. It was one of the towns which paid tribute to Powhatan, who at the time of the English settlement at Jamestown was building up in Virginia something roughly approximating a "kingdom."

After the departure of John Smith from Jamestown, relations between Powhatan and the colonists soon became strained. Both the English and her father recognized that the lovely Pocahontas was a valuable hostage. She was hidden away at Patowomeke. In 1612, through the treachery of an Indian, she was kidnapped by Captain Samuel Argall and taken to Jamestown, where she was held captive while negotiations were conducted with her father for the return of English prisoners. During her captivity she and John Rolfe fell in love and good relations between the Indians and whites were restored temporarily by their marriage.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

THOSE DONKEY TAGS On the morrow all good Democrats are asked to purchase a donkey tag. The good ladies who will vend them are most anxious it be understood the donkey tags are not for the personal identification of the purchaser's disposition or personality.

They are to identify him or her as a member of the Democratic party. The Democratic women are to begin selling the tags in Atlanta on Friday. The sale continues for one week with all Democrats urged to purchase a tag for any sum they desire.

The Democratic ladies are quite frank. They admit that a difficult fight is ahead; that 1940 will not be an easy one. The party is to be met with a militant Republican party whose recrudescence has been brought about by failure of the Democrats to solve the problem of unemployment and farm surpluses.

Therefore small sums to be added to the large sums greatly are desired. Therefore the Democrats of Georgia are urged to purchase tags bearing on them the emblem of the Democratic party. Beautiful ladies of all ages and sizes will vend the tickets and there is a possibility, of course, that even a few hardhearted, gleaming-eyed Republicans will put down a small sum, or pittance, to purchase a tag from some of Georgia's feminine beauty and brains.

Most assuredly all Democrats are expected to purchase tags. There is a reason. The good Democratic ladies make plain a certain fact.

"NO PARTISAN OR POLITICAL ELEMENT" The good ladies take great care to explain these tags are Democratic tags. They most patently wish to get over the idea they are not working for Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Garner, Mr. McNutt or any other candidates or potential candidate.

These tags are for the party and they expressly state: " . . . This has no partisan or political element mixed in it. The women as a whole are united for the party. They are not torn by jealousy are divided as to the party nominee. Their energies are bent toward uniting party elements. This is the first time in the history of the party that a bid is made for the small contributions by the sale of tags. This gives the small contributor an opportunity to make a donation within his power to contribute. This method first is being tested and tried in Georgia. It places an imperative responsibility upon the Democratic women of this state. Women work more unselfishly than men. Their patriotism is not infused with selfish interest and we need some old-time patriotism in our state and nation. . . ."

On that basis the electorate of the state will be asked to purchase the donkey tags and to wear them as an expression of their faith in the party.

Even if some of your best friends are members of the party of Herbert Hoover it is best to forgive them or at least to bear them no malice. The party of the people must triumph.

THE PARTY OF THE PEOPLE It will be a pleasure to buy these tags. After all, the Democratic party is the property of the people who are its members. It is not the property of Mr. Garner or Mr. Roosevelt or of Tommy Corcoran. It does not belong, although at times it would seem so, to the WPA. It is the party of the people.

It has spent six years in office and has brought to the great masses of people more beneficial legislation than any other administration. At the same time it has shown a woeful lack of appreciation of the necessity of bringing business along to take up unemployment. It has brought about many constructive reforms in the social structure of the nation. It has provided opportunity for homes and for financing homes. It has, at the same time, been unduly hostile to industry and has, in fact, treated all honest employees and industrialists exactly as it has treated dishonest ones. It has, by taxation, created fear and frozen the expansion and development of business. It has, through fear, slowed down the establishment of new industries.

Some of its left-wing radicals have sought to prove that the profit system is wrong and would substitute a tyranny such as exists in Russia. Yet it remains the party of the people and the people must look to it for hope.

The Democrats ought to purchase tickets, remembering that they voted into power those who are in. They have the privilege of voting them out. There is no need to adopt a defeatist attitude. By all means let's all good Democrats never forget that the party is the thing. It will not do to permit those starry-eyed Republicans to become too confident.

Even Ford and Chrysler Would Go Broke If Customers Set The Price of Cars

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

Only a few generations have come and gone since a famous English philosopher said the earth's population could increase but little more because it was impossible to produce enough food for a greater number.

Without the help of gang plows, harvesters, canneries and other modern equipment, farm people simply could not produce enough for all town people. The poor were always hungry.

A bumper crop caused general rejoicing in those days, but now it seems a calamity to the farmer and brings hard times to those who sell him goods and services.

Machinery hasn't affected other commodities in the same way. Shoes and hats and fabrics and other machine-made articles still bring a price that affords the makers a profit.

When you buy some item of ladies' wear at half its normal worth, you know it was imported from some land of starvation wages or produced by some furtive slave-driver who paid girl workers an hour's wage for a day's toil.

Behind every article that sells for too little there is a worker who gets starvation wages. Your "bargain" comes out of somebody's hide.

The farmer can use unskilled labor—often juvenile—and get it, in most sections, at a fraction of the wage paid skilled workers.

He can't, as a rule, pay decent wages. His crop doesn't bring enough. The small farmer who works for himself is working for starvation wages. Hired labor must work for little because it is producing something that brings little. There are only so many bites in a cherry.

Why not pay the workers a decent wage and charge it to the consumers? Because the farmers aren't organized, and each must take what is offered for his crop.

Government management, in a roundabout, wasteful, ruinous way, forces consumers to pay the farmer more. They pay little enough when they buy, but the government taxes them and gives the money to the farmer—and this complicated method of beating the devil around a stump gives the farmers far less than consumers pay, for it includes the cost of thousands of jobholders.

The only hope, in a free land, is a voluntary organization of farmers. It would harm

THIS MORNING

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES II.

"He went through fire and through water..."

As between fire and water in the making of electricity the latter begins to seem more dramatic and political but the former more economical. Now that the strike has taught America the value all over again the coal which ruthless competition has tended to supply in bitterly wasteful excess, it is interesting to be told of infinitely greater values in coal than have ever yet come of it. One of these values is electric power. In a paper on the "Economics of Power in Alabama" which he prepared for the recent southern pilgrimage of the famous Newcomen Society of England, and which has just been published in pamphlet form, President Thomas W. Martin, of the Alabama Power Company, states that the "waterwheel" has just about obtained its maximum of efficiency in the production of electric power, whereas the efficiency of equipment using coal shows continued progress.

The statistics of this progress are startling. To make a kilowatt hour of electric power in 1899 it was necessary to burn seven pounds of coal. To make a kilowatt in 1919 only five pounds were needed. And to make one in 1936 only 1.44 pounds were required. And today, according to Mr. Martin, the most efficient modern stations are producing a kilowatt hour from eight-tenths of one pound of coal. What is of even more interest, this record is being achieved with an efficiency of only 31 per cent in the conversion of steam to power.

"Here," Mr. Martin concludes, "lies a tremendous opportunity for further progress in the use of coal. It is easy to believe him. One can almost imagine coal becoming so precious in this and many other industries, including the almost infinite ones of its by-product industry, that it will be worth while to import some of the coal quantities at the south. One can almost imagine electric power made so cheap in some distant day of nearly 100 per cent steam conversion efficiency that it will turn a thousand wheels to one turned now and that the profits which have come in the past from the more modern and social way of volume of business done.

For coal, cotton, electric power and other products of the south the way to health seems to be the way of greater efficiency in production or use—and that is another word for greater economy. Many new uses await them and many increments in old uses, but these can come only as they qualify in economy against both competitive products and what the public will pay. Lower the costs of producing cotton and electric power and pass the benefits on to the public in lower prices—and you bring these products within range of all sorts of new volume. Improve the efficiency of coal uses and the uses that depend on coal—and you multiply old and new demand. In the south, as everywhere else, the law of survival and success is no longer profit in terms of margin per unit over cost per unit but profit in terms of an even lower price and an even larger volume.

The complication, of course, is labor. Lower prices obtained merely through lower wages are not only uncivilized but also uneconomic. They are uncivilized because they mean splitting a few of us by degrading the many of us. And they are uneconomic because they destroy the very purchasing power which is supposed to create a new volume of consumption based on lower price. Labor, it seems to this column, has every need and right to join hands against being made the basis for a competitive lowering of costs and prices. But, on the other hand, it does not seem to us that labor has a need or right to join against efficiencies and machineries and chemistries and general economies—even though some of these mean displacement of labor. If a mechanical cotton picker, for example, could lower the cost of producing cotton enough to increase the uses of cotton importantly, the resulting stepup in the general economic levels of the south would more than provide for the cotton pickers deprived of jobs.

OTLEY IS RENAMED
CHAIRMAN Y. M. C. A.

Trustees, Directors Elect Officers, Present Annual Report of Organization.

John K. Otley was re-elected chairman of the board of trustees of the Atlanta Young Men's Christian Association yesterday at a joint meeting of the trustees and the board of directors.

Other officers re-elected were Floyd Field, secretary, and T. K. Glenn, secretary. George Winship was chosen a trustee to succeed the late Oscar Newton, former president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta.

Lawrence Willett, president of the directing board, presented the annual report, announcing that for the sixth consecutive year the association had operated within its income.

During the year, Willett said, there was an attendance of 243,011 at the Y. M. C. A. building on Luckie street, an average of 655 a day; 4,032 young men and boys held membership, while 6,257 lived in the building's dormitories temporarily or permanently.

Activities listed. Compilation of the various group activities showed an attendance of 53,775 in the physical department, while 724 grade school boys enrolled during the free swimming school; 337 boys enrolled in 16 Hi-Y clubs, and rolled up a total attendance at the meetings of 7,440.

Fourteen thousand seven hundred fifty two underprivileged Atlanta boys attended the series of moving pictures, gymnasium classes, swimming, games, Christmas party and summer picnics arranged for them; 1,186 attended the association's Bible study and religious discussion groups, while religious meetings led by secretaries outside the association drew 3,846.

Thirty-nine different religious, educational, musical and professional organizations held 371 meetings during the year, attended by 12,474 persons.

LIVING COST DROPS FOR WAGE EARNERS

WASHINGTON, May 17.—(P)—Secretary Perkins reported today that the cost of living for the families of wage earners and low-salaried workers was nine-tenths of one per cent lower on March 15 than on last December 15.

The department's survey in 32 large cities, she said, showed that all items counted into the cost of living had declined with the exception of fuel and light.

Food costs she said, averaged 27 per cent lower on March 15 than on December 15.

Netherlands Indies shipped nearly 47,000 tons of tobacco products to the United States in three months.

Launch School To Teach Attendants Super Service

Organized service station proprietors of Georgia have started a school in Atlanta to train their employees in the fine points of servicing automobiles. Twice a week the colored workers who do the jobs attend night classes in which they are shown how to handle the oiling and greasing. Here, left to right, are Principal P. S. Woodward, of the Atlanta Opportunity school, which conducts the classes, discussing problems with Alvin Cates, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, while the grease gun is in the hands of Guy Holcombe, president of the Georgia Association of Petroleum Retailers.

Service Station Owners Launch Program To Improve Industry

Start Organization To Bring Together 10,000 Proprietors in State; Begin Night School To Train Negro Attendants in Work; Elect Officers.

Service station proprietors of Georgia have launched a campaign to move their industry up a few notches in the business world.

They want to lift themselves above the level of mere filling station proprietors and train the workers in the fine points of skilled service to the motorists.

Two outstanding moves have launched the new program: Leaders in the Atlanta field started yesterday the Georgia Association of Petroleum Retailers as the nucleus of an organization to bring together Georgia's 10,000 or more service station operators and elevate the standards of their profession.

Night School Started.

A night school has been launched in Atlanta, as a part of the curriculum of the Atlanta Opportunity School, in which will be trained the negro workers who attend to the grease and oil jobs on automobiles.

Elected to lead the new organization were Guy Holcombe, president; W. S. Sims Jr., first vice president; Charles C. Moon, second vice president; T. R. Brooke, secretary; R. M. Wilkerson, treasurer, and Harold L. Boerlin, executive secretary.

The newly-formed organization is an outgrowth of the Atlanta Association of Petroleum Retailers, in which are represented 250 Atlantans. Invitations are being sent to skeleton organizations in Macon, Columbus, Savannah, Augusta, Athens and other cities to add their strength to the state organization in an effort to attain wider recognition for the petroleum industry.

Cates Leads Move.

At the organization meeting Alvin B. Cates, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, congratulated the petroleum men on their decision to organize, improve their business and win themselves the recognition they need.

"The Chamber of Commerce is glad to welcome another civic organization which has its foundations on the most important businesses of the modern world," said Mr. Cates.

The night school for the negro workers in the service stations is held Tuesday and Wednesday nights of each week at a service station at Cone and Luckie streets, which has loaned its equipment on these nights to the officials of the Atlanta Opportunity school. Behind its organization is an effort to improve the type of service all stations are now offering to the motoring public.

40 Workers Enrolled.

Although the school has been in operation only two weeks, 40 workmen from Atlanta stations have enrolled for instruction under the tutelage of Robert Penn, a colored graduate of Morristown Industrial school, at Morristown, Tenn., a graduate of Clark University, and an automobile mechanic of long experience. Penn was obtained as an instructor by the Opportunity school after a long search through Atlanta.

At the school, each night, some phase of service is done on an automobile and all angles of this particular type of service explained in detail. After the job is completed on the car, each student is required to explain just why everything was done.

Besides being taught the intricacies of oil service and greasing jobs, washing and polishing, the students are taught how to maintain clean service stations to attract the motorists.

Enrollment in the school is not compulsory and the course is free. All service station proprietors and workers have been invited to avail themselves of this free course.

Classes start at 7:30 o'clock on Tuesday and Wednesday nights, two nights which, experience has taught station proprietors, are the lightest of their work.

NEW POLIO FIGHT LAUNCHED IN S. C.

Six More Cases Reported at Charleston, Though.

CHARLESTON, S. C., May 17. (UP)—As the South Carolina Health Department launched a new fight to prevent spread of infantile paralysis, six new cases were reported tonight in Charleston and one in Denmark counties.

State Health Officer Dr. James A. Hayne, expecting a slow spread of the disease, ordered sheriffs to quarantine all children taken from the Charleston area to their sections.

Health officers from 16 counties met late today at Wallerboro for instructions on how to prevent spread of infantile paralysis.

Dr. R. C. Hood, Washington, official of the Federal Children's Bureau, left Columbia to come here to aid in the fight.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—(P)—Appointment of Norman Armour, of New Jersey, to be ambassador to Argentina was unanimously approved by the senate today.

CROP GROWTH GOOD,
WEATHERMAN SAYS

Weekly Summary Reveals Cotton Planting Is Nearly Finished.

Crop growth was generally good through the state last week, though several days were too cold for cotton and tobacco, the United States Weather Bureau reported yesterday in its weekly summary of Georgia agricultural conditions.

Rainfall has been adequate, and interfered but little with farm work.

Cotton planting is nearly finished with the exception of replanting made necessary in the northern section due to cold weather. Stands are mostly good in south Georgia, and chipping is well advanced. Corn cultivation is well advanced in the south and middle sections, but considerably more planting remains to be done on low ground in the north.

Some Irish potatoes are now being dug near the coast, while transplanting sweet potatoes is near completion in southern counties. Pimento peppers is reported set out, and cabbage is reported heading in the central counties under favorable weather conditions. The first crate of peaches was shipped north May 9, and Mayflower and Mountain Rose varieties were reported ripening.

Gern Returns to the Farm But Keeps In Touch With Glada's Father

WHAT HAS SHE DONE BEFORE she married? Gladie Lee worries her mother because she dropped her university course two years ago and now is more interested in her life than in matrimony. Edna Lee, her father, is a farmer. Gladie Lee's leading citizen. Her older brother, John Lee, is a doctor. Gladie Lee's Masters, the Youngest, is engaged to a young man whose father she works in the nearby town. Gladie Lee Mary Lee feels that her daughter should be a young woman. Gladie Lee's good-looking young pastor, the Rev. Mr. Lee, is a young man. Gladie Lee would make a good dinner, she suggests he isn't interested in marriage. The next day Gladie Lee goes to the farm and tells her she loves her. saying "I want to marry you." Cobb says "I intend to marry you." Gladie Lee's father, breaks his leg and she gives him a good dinner. Gladie Lee gives evidence of culture but has a puzzle. Gladie Lee's father, tells Gladie Lee that Masters, the Youngest, is a young man. Gladie Lee says, must go away and needs to be a young man. Gladie Lee says much. She threatens to go to the Bar. Gladie Lee's father tells Gladie Lee she met the man who was a young man. Gladie Lee and what happened is hazy. Finally Gladie Lee's father, tells Gladie Lee that Masters reports she "listened to reason." When Gladie Lee writes that the girl is bragging about her father's $500 a year salary, she admits he paid her $1,000. Gladie Lee says she is a young man. Gladie Lee says and asks her to remain in charge. Gladie Lee says $1,000. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"Somebody told me it was close to the airport," Ed suggested quietly.

"Yes. That was it. A damn plane had to be taking off . . . came right over us. It was only a second, but I . . ."

"I know," Ed interrupted. Don't think about it now."

"But it was all my fault! I suggested coming around home that way . . . never thought . . ."

"There, there . . . nobody's going to blame you, boy. Perhaps we all were a little at fault. We'll hope for the best. I must go back up now. Mrs. Lee's pretty much upset. I'll go with the kids . . . must telephone the doctors. Can I do anything for you?"

"Yes, sir. Let me call you often. I know how these dumps are about telling you anything. I'm going back to the farm. Whether they like it or not."

"Call whenever you like, Gern. If you'll make it around dinner time, I'll try to answer myself. But I'll see that you get all the information there is."

"Thank you, sir."

"If you want to go home now, Bill's out front with the car. Tell him I said to run you tout to the farm and come back here."

"What's the mousin'?" came to a crunching halt at the side gate, Irma Peters hurried out on the porch only to halt in wide-eyed amazement at the sight of Gern Jones pausing to speak to the Lee chauffeur before alighting. She heard him say, "Thanks a lot, Bill."

Apparently there were no other passengers.

Before she could conjecture the meaning of so unusual a procedure, Gern stepped stiffly to the ground and she glimpsed the bandage under the turned-down brim of his hat. With a little cry of alarm, she hurried to meet him.

"Don't you know what's the matter? Are you hurt? Where's the car?"

"I'm all-right. The car's smashed." The dull hopelessness in his face and voice made Irma suddenly aware that she had not heard the worst.

"Miss Lee's . . . she managed faintly. "Don't tell me she's . . ."

"She's in the hospital. Yes, she's hurt bad. If she dies, I killed her."

"Now what kind of talk's that! If that poor lamb's hurt, it was an accident of course. They're happening every day. You know that. It ain't like you're drunk and . . ."

"Wish I was like you was the hopeless rejoinder. "Maybe I could forget things for a little while."

"Nonsense! You're shook up and your head hurts you, if it ain't anything worse the matter. You come right up and sit in my rocker. There's hot water and I'll make you some strong tea in no time. There ain't anything better."

"I don't want anything."

"She's terribly hurt. . . she may die . . ."

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself for talking so, Gern Jones! God wouldn't let anything so dreadful happen to a sweet, innocent child like Miss Glada. She never harmed anybody in her whole life. It just couldn't be like that!" It didn't happen.

"That's what you think," Gern answered drearily. "I could tell you things. . ."

"He broke his words off short."

"What things?"

"Nothing."

Irma waited a moment before she spoke. "Would it do you any good if I was to call the hospital. Do you think they'd tell me anything?"

"No. Don't. I arranged to call Mr. Lee this evening. He promised he'd tell me whatever there was to tell."

"Then I guess he isn't blaming you for what happened," Irma conjectured shrewdly.

"He's a swell little guy, all right."

To Mrs. Peter's added distress, Gern went into Glada's office and seated himself at the desk, resigning to come to the table when supper was ready or to have any food brought to him.

"Let him alone," was Cobb's advice when his wife appealed to him. "If there's nothing more than his head cut, his stomach'll be speakin' up in time to save him from starvin'."

"But he oughtn't to take on like that, blaming himself."

"I'd feel the same if it was me. Any white man would, I'm darn glad I wasn't drivin' that car, 'specially if I declare if you ain't as bad as Mr. Gern! Get on with you."

It should be all right to call the Lee house about seven, Gern decided during that office vigil. The sense of exile baffled him as the clock hands crept on their slow journey. If he were anybody else he could be in Dale City just now, he could be in one of the waiting rooms at the hospital. Or even at the Lees', keeping watch with the ones who loved Glada best. But aside from Ed Lee, the other members of the family undoubtedly would consider his presence or any contact with him whatever as an intrusion. You couldn't blame them. He had been driving for Glada at the time of the accident. He was responsible for her safety, no matter how you looked at it.

There was but one scant comfort left him. He was all alone in this little room. He was alone. Item of furnishing spoke of Glada Lee. Everything on and about the desk knew the touch of her slender fingers, brought up a hundred pictures. The silence and the deep shadows in the corners made it a shrine. A shrine to the mother and the father of one Gern Jones. No one else would think of coming here, would want to. It was all his.

"Yes you do, now. You're coming with me."

At Irma's direction, as she stood over his gulped down some of the steaming brew, then put the cup aside. Leaning forward in his chair, he supported his chin in his copped palms and stared fixedly at the floor until a sudden paroxysm of coughing on the part of his nurse caused him to look up.

"Here . . ." she wheezed. "Take this nasty thing! You're always talking about them being good for nerves." She was holding a lighted cigaret at arm's length.

"Thanks, Irma. I did need that."

"Can you tell me anything about it, Mr. Gern? Or would you sooner or not? Seems to me I can't settle down until I know something about Miss Glada."

"There isn't much to tell, Irma. The car left off the road and he took a position. I got Miss Glada out and a car took us to the hospital. She was hurt around the head and was unconscious when I came away. Her father told me that. He had Bill bring her home."

"Any bones broken?"

"No. I don't know. All I know is she's terribly hurt. She may be dead, for all I know."

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself for talking so, Gern Jones! God wouldn't let anything so dreadful happen to a sweet, innocent child like Miss Glada. She's a dear, good body in her whole life. It just couldn't be like that. It doesn't happen."

"That's what you think," Gern answered drearily. "I could tell you things. . . ." He broke his

If only Ed Lee would answer the phone when the time came. "He didn't," Fern conjectured. "He was talking to one of the sons, but an indescribable relief swept over him when he heard a second voice saying, 'I think that call is for me. I'll take it.'"

"This is Jones, Mr. Lee." "I thought it might be," was the kindly answer. "Not much to tell you, still unconscious. No other injuries have developed yet, except a badly wrenched knee. She has a special nurse tonight."

"I see. I was hoping."

"I know. If there is any definite change by morning, I'll see that you have word. I'll call you anyway. You'll be around the place?"

"Day and night."

"How are you feeling now?"

"I'm all right."

"Glad to know that. Good night."

"Mighty decent little egg, asking about me," Gern muttered as he put the telephone down and got to his feet. Irma and Cobb were in the kitchen waiting for news. If only he could carry them encouraging word. And a long night to face. Wondering.

He would have been even more depressed had he witnessed the scene in the Lee living room when Ed entered and announced that he was going to the hospital. The shadowy form of Mary Lee lying on the couch, a handkerchief pressed to her eyes. Bailey and Trevor Lee and their wives were in attendance, sitting motionless and silent in their chairs.

"Who was calling?" demanded, taking the handkerchief from her face as her husband stood uncertainly in the center of the room.

"Jones. Out at the farm."

"Oh . . ." It was a shivering moan. "How could you bear to talk to him, Ed? After what he did!"

"Why not, Mama? He would want to know. He was . . . there."

"Yes, and he must have been drunk. Otherwise, it never would have happened. I can't see yet why she had to be riding around with that tramp!"

"That's what I can't understand," Edna Lee interjected sharply. "Poor Glada . . ."

"Just a moment." There was a little ring of authority in Ed Lee's voice that seldom was heard there. "Judgments aren't supposed to be made until the evidence is in. All of it. Incidentally, I have promised young Jones to keep him informed about Glada's condition. If he calls here, and I'm not about, he is to be told all that any of us know. I want that understood."

"I wonder if anybody thought to tell Mr. Stirling," was Mary's response.

"I dare say he knows," Ed suggested. "It's in the evening paper."

"It seems queer that he hasn't been here . . . he was so fond of Glada. I suppose he went right to the hospital. What did Masters say again?"

"He said he would start over as soon as he could."

"That sounds like a car coming in now. See who it is, Edna."

"It is a coupe," Mrs. Lee reported from the window. "It must be Masters. It is. Evelyn is with him."

When the two young people entered the room, Masters, with a

STATE HIGH COURT HEARS NEW TRIAL PLEA OF AYCOCK

Savannah Man Under Death Sentence for Slay-ing of Martha Sikes; Tribunal To Study Case.

A plea for a new trial for W. B. Aycock, former police chief of the Union Bag and Paper Corporation, of Savannah, under death sentence for the slaying of Martha Sikes, was taken under advisement by the state supreme court yesterday after hearing arguments.

Shelby Myrick told the court "If this man is guilty, under this circumstantial evidence, then this is certainly a remarkable state of affairs."

Wife's Confession Cited.
He contended the trial court was wrong in excluding the confession of Aycock's wife that she killed Martha Sikes.

During the first trial which ended in a mistrial, just as Assistant Solicitor General Andrew J. Ryan Jr. pointed a finger at Aycock and said he was the guilty man, Mrs. Aycock leaped up in the rear of the courtroom and shouted that she did it.

Ryan, opposing Myrick, pointed out that the defense made no motion for a mistrial on grounds that Mrs. Aycock's confession was excluded.

Ballistics Tests Listed.
Myrick related that Aycock offered his gun for ballistics tests to check the fatal bullet. He said the tests were made by Washington experts and added "they could not say the bullet came from Aycock's pistol."

A portion of the argument dealt with a man's bloody shirt found in the Sikes apartment.

Myrick asserted George Hall, state witness who lived near the victim, testified he saw Aycock leave the vicinity "about a minute after he heard a noise like a motorcycle and the state contended Aycock changed his shirt after shooting Martha and left the apartment. How could he change his shirt in one minute?"

The prosecutor said "the state never contended Aycock changed his shirt. We say the shirt was hanging on a doorknob and when the woman was shot she fell against the door and slipped to the floor, dragging the shirt with her. There were bloodstains streaking down the door."

Georgia Ex-Governor Speaks
Before Legislature of Florida.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 17.—(AP)—Eugene Talmadge, former Governor of Georgia, told a joint session of the Florida legislature tonight the nation's relief problems could be solved by giving land to the jobless.

"The only place in America where we can give people opportunity for jobs is on the land," he declared, advocating the homesteading of the millions of acres now owned by the federal government.

Talmadge said a protective tariff on farm products would keep out foreign competition and give the United States an opportunity to use the increased production.

GALLOGLY EQUALLY GUILTY, SAYS HARSH

ing he committed and deserves release from prison.

Up to Board.

So extended did the proceedings become that the hearing was continued until today to complete the testimony and hear the arguments of counsel. It began with sessions Wednesday and Thursday of last week when Governor Rivers pointed out that any action on a parole would be up to the parole board composed of Clem E. Rainey, of Dawson, chairman; George A. Johns, Winder, and Vivien L. Stanley, Dublin. The Governor is empowered to act, he explained, only in the event a pardon is sought.

Harsh was brought to the hearing only after his brother, William Harsh, Atlanta broker, and Leroy F. Wynne, an attorney, had assured the Governor and the board they were coming voluntarily in the interest of truth and justice.

Enters Alone.

Harsh entered the state senate chamber, scene of the hearing, alone. He was wearing a white shirt and dark tie and a pair of grey-striped trousers. His sister, Mrs. G. I. Tolson, of Atlanta, sat by the side of his brother while he testified. Also present in the chamber during the proceedings were Gallogly's mother, Mrs. Frances Gray Yankey, and his newly-wed wife.

George Harsh said he and Gallogly as fellow students at Oglethorpe University, planned together each of a series of holdups that resulted in the fatal shooting of Smith and Meek and that Gallogly co-operated willingly with him in executing the plans.

"Dick Was Timid."

The arrangement, he said, was for him to go inside and actually commit the robbery while Gallogly waited outside. Asked by Governor Rivers why Gallogly always remained outside, he said: "Dick was timid and had a scar on his neck that made it easy to identify him."

Denies He Was Restrained.

Harsh denied an earlier statement attributed to him to the effect that Gallogly went to the door of the drug store and sought to restrain him from the hold-up in which Smith was killed. In rebuttal, Dyer introduced L. K. Webb, who said he heard Harsh make this statement at the Fulton county jail in the presence of Gallogly.

Gallogly received his prison sentence when he voluntarily confessed the Smith slaying after two efforts to convict him had ended in mistrials. He has contended through his attorney that he did this to save Harsh who already had been convicted and sentenced to the electric chair but whose sentence then was commuted to life. Harsh denied this saying Gallogly confessed only after his attorneys had arranged for Harsh to testify at Gallogly's third trial.

Asks Forgiveness.

In his plea for clemency for himself and Gallogly, Harsh said he hoped the "people of Georgia" would forgive him for his offenses, that he had spent "10 terrible years" in prison and had tried to prove he deserved "another chance."

"In all of this," he said, "I have been sustained by the faithful love of a sweet mother and I hope that Dick and I can go free and prove what we can do."

In assailing what he said was Gallogly's conduct in prison, Solicitor General Boykin introduced as witnesses guards, former guards or officials from the Cobb, Effingham and Paulding county prison camps and the Milledgeville state farm along with a number of letters and affidavits.

Drinking Charged.

One of the statements bore the name of W. F. Brogren Jr., identified as the operator of a cafe and filling station at Springfield, Effingham county. The statement said Brogren and Gallogly went one night on a party at Savannah with three girls, drank "plenty of liquor" and had a "good time" at a cost of $70 to Gallogly.

Cliff Carlisle, a guard at the Cobb county prison camp while Gallogly was there, testified the prisoner often used vile language and once in a rage exclaimed that he "had sent one soul to hell and would send another." Henry Ford, deputy warden at the Cobb camp, said he had signed a letter recommending clemency for Gallogly but the prisoner's conduct later became so vicious that he sought unsuccessfully to withdraw his recommendation.

C. T. Sherouse, of Springfield, who said he was in charge of equipment at the Effingham camp for five years, said the privileges accorded Gallogly "far exceeded those of any other prisoner." He said Warden W. R. Sexton let Gallogly sleep in his office as his "roommate" and that when Sexton was no longer warden Gallogly was transferred to Evans county where Sexton's step son, Harry Bridwell, was warden.

Accused of Gambling.

Harvey Grubbs, who said he acted as cook at the Effingham camp while serving five years for automobile larceny, testified he had seen Gallogly leave the camp "dressed in civilian clothes," returning at times under the influence of liquor. He said Gallogly had his own meals prepared and all he got from the county was "sugar and water."

Paul Smith, former guard at the state farm at Milledgeville, said a prisoner once gave him $75 to keep which he said he had won from Gallogly in a gambling game. He told also of finding Gallogly and two other prisoners with three girls at a spot by the roadside near Milledgeville where they had gone in a taxicab.

Robert A. Cooper, former guard at Paulding county, said another prisoner once told him he had won $65 gambling with Gallogly.

Affidavits Read.

Affidavits were read from J. W. Cole and Roy Fuller, of the Paulding county camp, saying Gallogly would ask to be let into the "bull pen" to play cards and was known to the other prisoners as a "professional gambler."

The repeated reference to gambling at the prison camps prompted Governor Rivers to ask if any of the guards had reported to prison officials "what they are saying here." He asked later for their names saying the "gist of things seems to be that there is open gambling throughout the prison system" and that if this were true "these guards ought to have reported it."

said Adams' designation followed. Meanwhile, a court fight over the attempt of Huiet to oust James appeared impending.

Huiet was served early yesterday with Governor Rivers' latest order directing him to restore James to duty as director of the Bureau of Unemployment Compensation but last night had not announced compliance with the order. James, through his attorney, Senator Paul Lindsay, said he still was unable to enter his office in the 101 Marietta street building.

Governor Rivers' order, issued Tuesday, was the second such edict by the chief executive. It followed Huiet's latest effort to relieve James of his duties by ordering abolition of the office to which James had been serving as executive director and director of the Unemployment Compensation Bureau. Huiet first ordered James removed from office, and when Governor Rivers rescinded the order, the commissioner issued a new edict abolishing the office. James now has been out more than a week.

Keeps Door Locked.

Governor Rivers referred the matter to Attorney General Ellis Arnall, and the attorney general held that Huiet had authority to abolish the executive director's office but not the authority to abolish the director's office. Hence the Governor's second order restoring James.

It was reported last night that Huiet could continue to keep James' door locked, thereby forcing the director to go to court to learn his status. Senator Lindsay said that no court action would be taken until "Huiet has had ample time to comply with the Governor's order."

Huiet could not be reached for a statement.

Atlanta's Tardy Taxpayers Crowd 'Mourners' Bench' for Delinquents

John Q. Citizen is moanin' low at the tax receiver's office at the city hall.

Scores who failed to file their 1935 returns and who have not yet listed their 1936 holdings, occupy a long line of chairs known in semi-official circles as "the mourners' bench."

For the convenience of those who are delinquent, W. N. Blankenship, chief tax investigator, has set up several desks under the supervision of a group of assistants, and everything is made "as painless as possible" while prospective taxpayers are filing their properties.

Joe C. Little, senior tax assessor, yesterday commenting on the "mourners' bench," said the city is receiving 1935 taxes without a few days, but that this will cease as soon as digests have been posted.

After that time, there will be a straight 10 per cent penalty for failing to file within the proscribed time. If the taxes are then allowed to go to file, there will be a $1.50 cost for issuing it. In any event, 7 per cent interest will be charged from last Monday until the bill is paid.

"All we need now is a worrying rock for those who failed to file for 1935 and previous years," one attache said yesterday. "We have the mourners' bench, and believe you me, some of them really mourn because they didn't get here in time to avoid the penalties."

Little thanked the public for its co-operation and urged all eligible persons who have not yet filed their returns to do so at once and avoid further penalties. "Under the law, we must assess them," he said. "We have no choice in the matter. No matter how delinquent a person may be, we must assess him money by getting the records straight at once."

Clubwomen To Visit State Capitol As 'Georgia Products Week' Event

Atlanta clubwomen will visit the state capitol today to inspect the Department of Natural Resources as the city and state continue to celebrate "Georgia Products Week."

Mrs. James R. Little, president of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, sponsors of the special week, said a guide would be stationed at the capitol to conduct the visitors through the department. Miss Annette McClain, museum curator, and Miss Beverly Wheatcroft, of the State Library Commission, will welcome the group.

Emphasizing the fact that Georgia is rich in minerals, Mrs. Little said it was important that good citizens become acquainted with the state's natural resources. She recommended to Georgians the practice of visiting the capitols of other states and comparing the natural resources of those states with those of Georgia.

Meanwhile, hotels and restaurants continued to feature Georgia fruits and vegetables on their menus and housewives picked Georgia products for their tables. "Georgia Products Week" will close Saturday but the interest in the state's resources built up by the observance is expected to bring further benefits to Georgia.

Mrs. Little said 300 sets of "Georgia Products Week" posters were delivered yesterday to small grocery stores and restaurants. She reminded Atlantans of the many educational exhibits on display in downtown department stores.

Meanwhile messages of hearty approval came from George W. Wannamaker, superintendent of Brunswick and Glynn county schools, and W. J. Andrews, superintendent of Stephens county schools, upon the Georgia Products edition of last Sunday's Constitution.

"Surely the people of this great state whose progress is so graphically pictured in your paper will

ESTATE

Have you enough LIFE INSURANCE?

You have life insurance to offset the shrinkage in your family's income that your death will cause.

Have you insurance to protect your estate from shrinkage due to payment of estate settlement costs and taxes?

"Settlement shrinkage" usually consumes from 15% to 30% of the average estate, if the estate contains enough cash to pay costs and taxes. If the estate lacks cash, and assets must be sold at a sacrifice, shrinkage is larger.

If your life insurance is not sufficient to provide (1) cash for estate settlement expenses, and (2) future family income, confer with your life underwriter. He can tell you how much insurance you need, and why every dollar you invest in it may save two dollars or more of estate principal for your family.

Record Peacetime Naval Bill Reaches Senate

Quick Approval Expected; Provides Funds for 500 Planes, Two Battleships and 21 Other Warships.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—(AP)—A record peacetime naval appropriation of $773,049,151 reached the senate floor today bearing a committee endorsement of a house-approved clause forbidding the navy to buy Argentine canned beef.

By a 9 to 7 show of hands, the appropriation committee voted to retain the beef prohibition which resulted from the controversy between President Roosevelt and western legislators over a 48,000-pound order of the product.

Mr. Roosevelt described Argentine canned beef as superior to American, and naval officials urged the senate committee to remove the restriction, inserted by the house before it approved the appropriation.

Expect Prompt Action.

The senate is expected to give prompt approval to the huge supply bill, which contains funds for two 40,000-ton battleships, 21 other warships and auxiliaries and 500 fighting planes.

Other defense developments included:

1. The army announced that 1,000 enlisted men would be given a year's training at seven selected civilian schools to meet some of the immediate needs for aviation mechanics in the expanding air corps. Similarly, pilots will be given primary flying experience at nine private schools.

2. A report to the senate appropriations committee by naval officials showed construction of a new 14,500-ton aircraft carrier was lagging more than 18 months behind schedule. Work on most of 73 other ships was reported to be on time or ahead of schedule.

Plan Summer Training.

3. The army estimated that 293,996 regulars, national guardsmen, reserve officers, members of the student reserve officers training corps, and civilians would be given intensive summer military training in 1939 camps. Last year, with

'New York Fair, Here We Come'—Boy Patrolmen Entrain for Big City

"Good-bye, Mom and Pop. We'll tell you all about the fair when we get back." With this farewell, these lusty Atlanta schoolboy patrolmen boarded a train at the Terminal station yesterday afternoon and headed for the New York World's Fair. They were among 350 making the trip. City and county policemen will be in charge of the safety patrolmen as they view the sights at "The World of Tomorrow." The youngsters will return to Atlanta Sunday afternoon.

BRITISH POLICE FIRE ON JEWISH CROWD

than submit to Arab rule" and continued:

"Repressing a Jewish rebellion against British policy would be as unpleasant a task as the repression of the Arab rebellion has been. The government has disregarded this warning."

Sabotage in Palestine delayed the British government's attempt to relay a summary of its white paper over the radio.

Lines between the radio transmitting station at Ramallah and the Jerusalem studio were cut just as it began the broadcast. English and Arabic announcers were rushed to Ramallah, 15 miles from Jerusalem, in an armored car under heavy guard, however, and the broadcast was completed there.

Major Provisions. Main points of the British plan are:

1. Establishment within ten years of an independent Palestine state dominated by Arabs and bound commercially and strategically with Britain.

2. Permission for 75,000 Jews to immigrate to Palestine within the next five years—but thereafter Arab permission will be necessary for Jews to enter.

3. Granting to the British high commissioner power to restrict or control the sale of land, a blow to Jewish immigrants.

The plan must obtain approval of both parliament and the League of Nations. Jews planned strenuous efforts to defeat it, but the government, with an overwhelming majority in the house of commons and through its influence at Geneva, was confident of pushing the program through.

Britain Looks to War. A major consideration in what appeared to be concession to the Arabs at the expense of the Jews was believed to have been Britain's wish to have the support of the Moslem world in the event of a European war.

A declaration of British policy on November 2, 1917, by Lord Balfour, the British foreign secretary, invited Jews to make a national home in Palestine and expressed sympathy toward Zionist aspirations.

Of Jewish charges that limitation of immigration into Palestine is tantamount to a ban on Jewish immigration, the British plan states:

"If the state even remotely expects Palestine to receive persons returned from Milledgeville, it should arrange immediately to accept custody of our mental cases—at least those now in the tower."

"We have had to move furniture—beds—from some of the cells at the tower to preserve the lives of some of those there. Even the floors have been padded in some instances to prevent them from injuring themselves."

"I see no way through which the county itself can accept responsibility for those who are returned. The commission has been very definite in its stand, and I have an oral ruling from W. K. Meadows, of the county legal staff, backing us in our position on mental defectives."

"Among the 31 we now have, are some violently insane persons. Fulton county just does not have the proper facilities for handling such cases. We are operating a jail, not a mental hospital. We are being just as humane as possible under existing conditions."

Rivers Backs Hospital Heads. Governor Rivers yesterday backed the Milledgeville authorities in returning restored mental cases to the various counties of the state.

Such patients are no longer the charges of the state, the Governor said, and it is unfair to keep them at Milledgeville when there are many in jail, in violent condition, who cannot be placed in the asylum because it is so crowded.

"If the patients being sent back to Fulton county are well mentally and physically they are not charges of Fulton county. If they are indigent and are not self-sustaining they properly should be cared for on unemployable relief rolls," Almand, added. "It seems to me to be passing strange that 350 patients from Fulton county could be cured and all their faculties returned overnight. It appears to me that they were 'cured' by the state's financial stringencies, rather than by approved scientific methods no matter what other excuse is given."

"There seems to have been some threat to dump the returned cases on the courthouse steps. We could reciprocate by releasing the 31 mental cases we now have in jail on the hospital steps at Milledgeville, but either move would be foolish. We, however, have been unable to get the hospital to take them. We thus find ourselves in a position of taking responsibility for the state's charges."

"Out of the 31 cases in Fulton tower, eight men and four women are violently insane and are being cared for the best we can. There are eight cells for violent men. So, when another becomes actively violent, it is necessary to remove one of the least violent in the cells to make room for the new patient. Much the same condition prevails in the women's ward, where there are 11 patients."

"One of the men has been in the tower since November, 1938, and we cannot get him removed to the state hospital. We have cooperated with the state as far as we could."

W. G. COOPER SR., JOURNALIST, DIES

For a while he edited its book page and magazine section and, so well did he do it that he was placed in charge of the tri-weekly edition of The Constitution.

He went to The Journal as a reporter later on, before taking over the editorship of the Atlanta Daily News.

During his reporting days, he met and became friends with many of the famous persons who visited the city.

Helped Develop City.

Mr. Cooper always took an active part in the development of the city and section, and from this interest he took over the secretaryship of the Chamber of Commerce. Prominent Atlantans attribute a great deal of Atlanta's commercial development to the work Mr. Cooper did in those expanding years from 1902 to 1919.

History finally claimed his chief interest and he began the task of writing the volumes of the history of Georgia. The history was published last year by the American Historical Society.

Years ago he wrote another book, "Fate of the Middle Classes," which was an economic study of the life of the majority of Americans. He accurately foresaw and foretold, in this work, many of the economic developments and changes that have come to pass.

Prophetic Book.

"His book was prophetic of the times to come," his friends said of his work.

Back in 1895, Mr. Cooper worked ardently in promoting the Cotton States Exposition, the fair that was said to have "put Atlanta on the map."

Later, he directed publicity for the promotion of the Southeastern Fair with the idea of education for local people as well as advertising the states products.

Deacon of Church.

He was a deacon of the Druid Hills Baptist church at the time of his death. In this church he had worked for many years and was well known for his activity.

He was also a member of the Atlanta Historical Society and of the Symposium Club.

Mr. Cooper is survived by his wife, the former Miss Belle Walton Bacon, of Baconton; four daughters, Miss Cornelia Cooper, Miss Belle Cooper, of Atlanta; Mrs. Claude Christopher, of Griffin, and Mrs. Charles C. Bell, of Canton; a son, Walter G. Cooper Jr., widely known Atlanta lawyer, and three grandchildren.

Arrangements for the funeral, which probably will be held tomorrow, will be announced by H. M. Patterson & Son.

"Dead End" Tough Guy in Sentimental Pose

A telegram from his wife, who is in Hollywood, brought P. J. Dittig, of 807 Argonne avenue, N. E., the news yesterday that his pretty daughter, who is known in the films as Katherine Marvis, had gone by plane from Los Angeles to Yuma, Ariz., where she had married Leo Gorcey, 22, one of the "Dead End Kids" of film fame. The young couple are shown here just after the wedding ceremony was performed.

May Night Beckons, So 20 Inmates Of Hapeville Home Seek Freedom

15 of Score Are Promptly Recaptured as Alarm Is Quickly Spread; No Connection Seen Between This and Previous Breaks.

A starlit, balmy May night. Outside beckoned all the attractions of full spring, the singing denizens of the outdoors, the fresh earth, lush vegetation—the call of the open.

Indoors were but barrack-like rooms with many cots.

So 20 of the 80 inmates of the white Boys' Industrial Farm at Hapeville took it on the lam for liberty shortly before 8 o'clock last night.

Several of them used a bench in breaking open a window, and by one the even score of youths crawled through the opening and began streaking from the buildings in all directions.

But it was a short-lived adventure for most of them. The alarm was quickly spread, and within an hour 15 rueful figures had been returned. Five who remained at large, having succeeded where the others failed in thumbing rides from motorists, were listed by county police as Thomas Parks, Buster Masters and Hardwick Yates, all 17; Johnny Woods, 16, and Dennis Skelton, 18.

There was no relation between this and previous breaks, the newly appointed superintendent, W. H. Maxwell, declared, except that the boys yielded to the age-old impulse to escape confinement.

Affairs of the institution carefully were investigated by the March-April grand jury, following a sensational break early in March, and the then superintendent, J. Q. Nash, and some of his aides were relieved of their posts and later indicted.

But last night, officials agreed, was exclusively a matter of Maytime and the wide open spaces.

Young Atlanta Harpists Will Give Concert Tomorrow at White House

By Sally Forth.

TWELVE happy little girls left Atlanta yesterday for the national capital, where they will give a harp concert on Friday evening at the nation's White House at the invitation of Mrs. Roosevelt. The group is known as the Dobbs Miniature Harp Ensemble and the oldest member is Beverly Dobbs, who is 11 years old and is president of the ensemble. Five-year-old Jan Rivers, granddaughter of Governor and Mrs. Rivers, is the youngest of the harpists and Sally is informed that she will play a solo in compliment to the United States First Lady.

Accompanied by Mrs. Rivers and Beverly's mother, Mrs. Mary Griffith Dobbs, and several other parents of the group, the children journeyed to Washington in a special car. Upon arrival there they will be tendered a sight-seeing trip and this evening they will be honored guests at a dinner party to be given in the President's dining room of the Mayflower hotel.

The youthful Atlantans will travel to Baltimore early Saturday to present a concert at the convention of the National Federation of Music Clubs being held in that city. Before returning home the young harpists will visit New York and will attend the World's Fair on National Music Day, scheduled for May 24.

In addition to Beverly and Jan, other youngsters making the trip include Winifred Shackelford, Florence Crook, Ida Pennington, Louise Tate, Polly Tate, Zena Cate, Helen Sewell, Deborah Shaffer, Margene Branch and Sara Jacobs.

A MEDIEVAL theme was carried out when the Woman's College of Duke University observed May Day recently. A pageant, based on the "Pied Piper of Hamelin," was presented on the campus before the May Queen and members of her court, who wore satin gowns, peaked hats and wimples.

Noel Johnson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Frank C. Johnson, of Atlanta, was among the graceful dancers who performed for the important occasion. Noel, you know, is a graduate of North Fulton High school and is a popular member of the out-of-town college contingent of this city.

The attractive Atlanta belle participates enthusiastically in the activities of the Drama Club and rifle team at Duke, where she is a member of the freshman class, and is a valued pledge of Pi Beta Phi, national academic sorority.

Jane Smith, another Atlantian enrolled at Duke, was recently tapped to Sandals, honorary sophomore order. Sally is informed that membership in this society is based on outstanding scholarship, leadership and service, and is one of the highest honors attainable for a rising sophomore student.

Still another outstanding Atlantian enrolled in Durham's scholastic institution is Ann Rauschenberg, who was recently elected to the student forum committee.

This committee is invested with the authority to invite distinguished lecturers to Duke, and is an outstanding group on the campus.

MORE honors have been heaped upon Atlanta college girls in the recent news that Barbara Ann Nelson has been elected president of the Eta Epsilon Gamma sorority at Stephens College in Columbia, Mo.

There are 17 social sororities on the Stephens campus and leaders chosen in the recent elections will serve next year. These groups are not national, and their charity work consists of social work in Columbia and in the central section of the state. Members also take part in many dramatic, musical and social events, as well as maintaining study halls for new students. Barbara Ann is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Nelson, of 505 Manor Ridge road, and is a popular member of the younger set.

Miss Ethridge Plans Tea for Tomorrow.

Among the interesting events featuring tomorrow's social calendar is the tea at which Miss Jessie Ethridge will entertain at her home on Peachtree road. The occasion will assemble 100 members of the younger social contingent at 4:30 o'clock.

Hills Park Club.

Mrs. R. E. Macon entertained the Hills Park Garden Club recently at her home on Oak street.

When You Begin Taking Less Exercise, the Pounds Start Piling Up

Smart—and inexpensive. Jane Wyman, of the films, presents Hollywood's latest—a hand-crocheted bag and hat to match. The dark lavender pill-box hat is trimmed with twin ribbon clusters of contrasting colors. The bag has a shoulder-length strap and a long "carry-all" envelope base.

Bag-Hat Set, Latest Fashion In Hollywood

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, May 17.—Jane Wyman introduces the latest and cheapest fashion in Hollywood—a hand-crocheted bag and hat to match. The pill-box hat is made over a buckram frame, and trimmed with twin ribbon clusters of contrasting colors. The bag with its shoulder-length strap has a long "carry-all" envelope base; this is also made of Pearl Cotton, using a plain double crochet over a buckram foundation. You don't need much material—1-2 yard white buckram (twenty-five cents); six balls pearl cotton (ninety cents); No. 4 crochet hook (ten cents); 3-4 yard chartreuse half-inch grosgrain ribbon (fifteen cents), and 3-4 yard violet half-inch grosgrain ribbon (fifteen cents).

Another bag fashion note—Hollywood stars are hooking their purses to their belts. Which is not only good-looking, but utilitarian. Marie Wilson, appearing in "Sweepstakes Winner," affirms the handiest way to solve the problem of "what shall I do with my purse" when riding or bicycling. Marie's navy jersey play dress is belted in lemon leather with attached purse, zippered for safe keeping. Margaret Lindsay also has one—a pouch bag dangling from her belted waist—Margaret's dress, a brown silk wool with rose suede full-length coat. An envelope bag of light blue slipper satin is snapped to the sash of Olivia de Havilland's black tulle evening gown with ruffled skirt. With a white knitted dress with flared skirt, colored in yellow, orange, and red, Genevieve Fitzgerald has a matching angora purse buttoned to her belt. Irene Dunne attended the Vincent Sheehan lecture in a collar-

The "Fat Lady" Would Like To Be Thin

By Ida Jean Kain.

Did you ever wonder about the "fat lady" in the circus? Well, she would like to be slim! And I can tell you that very emphatically, having just been to see Dot Carson of the Ringling circus, who owes her career to the fact that she is about 450 pounds overweight!

Miss Carson is five feet seven, weighs 596 pounds, expects to hit 600, and has these measurements: Hips, 85 inches; waist, 80 inches; bust, 74 inches. The fault lies in the functioning of the pituitary gland and doctors are inclined to agree that something might have been done about it when she was a child, but that it's too late now. And in this connection, please let me diverge to point out that obesity in childhood is neither natural nor pleasant and that extreme cases should be under the treatment of an endocrinologist before it is too late!

Miss Carson is resigned to being a fat lady and takes a great delight in watching the people who come to view her. Some of the women who seem most interested, she says, are those who are on diets. Miss Carson is a very friendly person and sometimes they break down and tell her how hungry they are!

Just the same, if she could be slim, she would.

"I don't think any woman wants to be considered abnormal," she told me. "The thing I would really love to be able to do is walk into a store and buy a dress in stock. I've never done that in my whole life. When I was only 14 years old, I weighed 300 pounds and how I used to agonize over my weight! I've gotten over being so sensitive, but I still have to stand and be measured for everything I wear."

The most she ever gained at one stretch was 55 pounds. That was when she was 17 years old and recalls: "That was the winter the family had bought a house and I tended the furnace and did a lot of walking—and yet I gained all that weight!"

Most women, Miss Carson observed, seem to put on weight after they get married and settle down and later on in the forties. As soon as they begin to exercise the pounds begin to pile on.

Miss Carson comes from a heavyweight family. One sister weighs only six pounds less—"and when you get up in our class, what are six pounds?" But she is under the impression that the "fat lady" spends most of her pay check for groceries, you are very much mistaken. She eats less than many thin people and although she does not even lose weight when she is ill, the doctors are always giving her tonics and eggs and milk to build her up! Furthermore, she would appear to be the final proof that avoidantism is not compatible with optimum health. The first time I went around to see her, she was at home with a severe cold. Later I was told that she had pneumonia twice and pleurisy twice and that not long ago the doctors decided she was about to contract tuberculosis!

MY DAY Mrs. Roosevelt Invited On Sight-Seeing Trip

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON.—We are having our usual experience with the month of May. We schedule garden parties for out-of-doors and then spend all the morning trying to decide whether everybody will freeze on the lawn! However, the sun has come out today and, even though it is rather chilly, I think it is going to be fairly pleasant, and I am looking forward very much to the program which is being given by the Lafayette chorus from Lafayette College in Pennsylvania. A chorus of young men's voices out-of-doors is always particularly pleasant, I think.

We reached Washington rather late last night, and I found the President still struggling with hay fever. No amount of treatment seems to affect that particular ailment, so I am afraid he has it as a companion until he gets away from here and the particular plant or condition which irritates his nose.

I had asked a young friend of ours who grew up at Hyde Park, and who is now married and established in Buffalo, N. Y., to come with his wife and small boy of three, to spend a couple of nights here. They had already gone to bed when I arrived last night, so I signed my mail and followed suit. This morning we all met at breakfast, and I made the acquaintance of a very young gentleman who is not very deeply impressed with the White House and its inmates and feels that he does not like so many strangers.

They went off to visit various points of interest and, after a ride, I sat down to catch up on the various lists which cover my desk at all times nowadays.

On Pennsylvania avenue, on either side of the White House, there stand two unofficial groups of guides ready to show people the city. I have always felt that I much prefer to lose my own way and wander at will wherever I may be, but I suppose other people feel differently. Washington is certainly not an easy place to find your way if you have never driven around it. Some of the men have a sense of humor, and the morning one of them came up to the window of my car as I waited for the light to turn, and said: "We have a sight-seeing tour starting in five minutes. Would you like to go along, Mrs. Roosevelt?" I think I probably would learn a great deal, but I decided my time was too short to start in on it today!

I am going over to the Seventy-sixth Congressional Club for lunch, and there are a few appointments this afternoon, so the day, as usual, is fairly full.

I read two manuscripts last night on the way down on the train, both of them written to impress people with the horrors of war. One of them is really so horrible that I doubt if it would accomplish its purpose, for most people, I think, would stop reading it before they were half through. I often wonder whether these horrors are as effective with youth as something which has mere appeal to reason. Unless you had lived through certain things described, I doubt if they would seem possible.

Use Homegrown Products For Dinner This Evening

By SALLY SAVER

If you haven't done your bit toward making Georgia Products Week a success, do it right now. Plan today's dinner around the state's food products. Make a meal of homegrown products dinner.

This week offers opportunity for you to learn what Georgia has to offer. Since housewives buy most of the raw foods it is up to the housewife, largely, to make Georgia Products Week a success, as far as foodstuff is concerned. We women are pretty busy with homes and children and school associations and civic clubs and such, and as a rule we don't understand a great deal about economics except when it affects the household allowance. But we have come to find out that when our neighbors are prosperous, so are we. And when our neighbors are in economic difficulties, we aren't doing so well either.

In this case, our neighbors are Georgia people who live on farms and produce meat, fruits and vegetables. We, each in our own small way, can help increase the prosperity of these neighbors. And strange as it may seem, we can do it by buying and serving to ourselves some very good food! Try this menu for Thursday dinner:

this way: Select beads of medium size. Boil until tender. Cool and peel. With a sharp knife remove a little section in the center of one end. Save this for the salad bowl, and fill the hollow of the beet with a bit of cottage cheese seasoned with salt, pepper and a bit of onion juice. Serve on lettuce leaves or romaine.

Pie Crust:
1 cup scalded milk
1/4 cup sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons flour

1/2 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 cup heavy cream, whipped
3 cups washed, hulled strawberries

3-4 to 1 cup current jelly
Make and bake tart shells. Meanwhile bring water in bottom of double boiler to a boil. Pour the scalded milk slowly over the sugar, salt and flour combined with the eggs. Cook in double boiler until thick, stirring constantly. Add vanilla; cool. Just before using, fold in the cream. Fill the tart shells half full of this cream mixture. Spread a layer of strawberries over the cream. Heat the currant jelly until it melts, and spread about 1 tablespoon on top of each tart. Make 12 tartlets.

Words of Wisdom.
Neither human applause nor human censure is to be taken as the test of truth; but either should set us upon testing ourselves.—Whately.

BRIDGE TINKERERS.
Bridge has its fuss budgets, too. Folks always and forever itching to tinker with tested and proven bridge theories and conventions. Right now some of them would like to promote substitutes for the most scientific and precise bid in bridge... the Culbertson four-five notrump convention.

It is no use. They are only wasting their time and wearing out bridge players' patience. The Culbertson four-five notrump showing convention will continue to aid the average bridge player in arriving at 90 per cent of the possible slam hands he is fortunate enough to hold. It will keep him out of just as many unmakeable slam contracts.

EASILY UNDERSTOOD.
The accepted four-five notrump slam-bidding convention is simplicity in itself. Once a partnership has established a suit in which the final contract should be played, a bid of four notrump, made by either partner, shows:

1.—Any three aces.
2.—Two aces and the king of any suit previously bid by either partner.

RESPONSES ARE SIMPLE.
Responses are just as simple. One thing partner can do is pass. Responses are purely automatic.

(a) Bid five notrump, holding any two aces.
(b) Bid five notrump, holding one ace and the kings of all suits previously bid by the partnership.

(c) Bid five in a new suit in which an ace is held. If it is lower in rank than the trump suit, with no added values.

SHOWS ADDED STRENGTH.
(d) Bid five in a new suit of higher rank than the agreed trump suit to show the ace of the suit, provided the hand contains values not previously shown.

(e) Jump to six in trumps with one ace or with all kings, holding values not previously shown.

(f) To sign off bid five in the lowest suit named by either partner during the bidding.

Till tomorrow...

Impotent Rage Won't Solve Problems

By Caroline Chatfield.

Dear Miss Chatfield: When you live in town there's usually something you can do about whatever worries you. But when you live down on the farm you are more or less at the mercy of fate. Well I am 24 years old. I live on the farm and here are my worries. My father and mother want to marry me off to a farmer and I loathe the country and I don't love him and I won't marry him. Nevertheless this decision doesn't solve my problem: for in spite of the fact that I have a good business education I can't find a job and my parents are violently opposed to my leaving home and won't help me. They think I should be a maid for the family and spend my life with them. My sisters couldn't take it and they got out and found work in town, yet they think I should take it and devote my life to helping father and mother. I must have some advice or go nuts.

FARMER'S DAUGHTER.

Answer: You are indulging in impotent rage, my girl, railing out at your family, at your father, at fate and at anything or anybody that comes near you. Now calm yourself and realize that rage will tear you to pieces but won't take you out of the country. And don't kid yourself that living in a town automatically solves problems, either. You've at least got plenty to eat and a comfortable place to sleep which to many an unemployed city girl would sound like paradise proper. However, if you hate it don't stay in it.

Just as your sisters found a way out, you can find it, provided you use your head, and hold your temper. Now sit down and write each of them a letter, explaining your aversion to the woods and your keen desire to leave home. Ask them if they won't arrange to let you come and visit them and put out a few lines looking to a permanent position. Perhaps they will help you to this extent even if they don't approve of your plan. But remember you must not put any fury in your letters if you want their sympathy and co-operation.

The surest way for any of us to defeat ourselves permanently is to kick and scream at a momentary disappointment, curse fate and declare that we are trapped. With youth, health, intelligence, education (and no dependents) a 24-year-old girl needn't be kept down on the farm. She has the will to go to town.

The Culbertson Four-Five Notrump

By Harold Sharpsteen.

Some folks can drive any standard make automobile and enjoy every turn of the motor. Others are never quite satisfied with the performance of their car. They are everlastingly tinkering with it, always eager to try out any new gadget anybody has to offer. They never seem content to leave well enough alone.

BRIDGE TINKERERS.
Bridge has its fuss budgets, too. Folks always and forever itching to tinker with tested and proven bridge theories and conventions. Right now some of them would like to promote substitutes for the most scientific and precise bid in bridge... the Culbertson four-five notrump convention.

It is no use. They are only wasting their time and wearing out bridge players' patience. The Culbertson four-five notrump showing convention will continue to aid the average bridge player in arriving at 90 per cent of the possible slam hands he is fortunate enough to hold. It will keep him out of just as many unmakeable slam contracts.

EASILY UNDERSTOOD.
The accepted four-five notrump slam-bidding convention is simplicity in itself. Once a partnership has established a suit in which the final contract should be played, a bid of four notrump, made by either partner, shows:

1.—Any three aces.
2.—Two aces and the king of any suit previously bid by either partner.

RESPONSES ARE SIMPLE.
Responses are just as simple. One thing partner can do is pass. Responses are purely automatic.

(a) Bid five notrump, holding any two aces.
(b) Bid five notrump, holding one ace and the kings of all suits previously bid by the partnership.

(c) Bid five in a new suit in which an ace is held. If it is lower in rank than the trump suit, with no added values.

SHOWS ADDED STRENGTH.
(d) Bid five in a new suit of higher rank than the agreed trump suit to show the ace of the suit, provided the hand contains values not previously shown.

(e) Jump to six in trumps with one ace or with all kings, holding values not previously shown.

(f) To sign off bid five in the lowest suit named by either partner during the bidding.

Till tomorrow...

Myrna Loy wears this smart outfit on a $35-a-week budget in "Lucky Night."

A Budget May Save And Win You Money

By Lillie May Robinson.

"Two can live as cheap as one... if one don't eat!"... runs the old minstrel joke, and like the Bard or someone said, "There's many a gem of wisdom spoken in jest."

How many young wives, come the hind end of the budget week, are faced with a deficit, and forced to borrow from the coming week's allowance, or resort to the good old American custom of "charging it?"

In "Lucky Night," the M.-G.-M. movie opening at Loew's Grand theater Friday, Myrna Loy is acutely aware of this knotty problem quite often during her cinematic married life with Robert Taylor. The Constitution in its woman's pages, food supplement, etc., does its best to counsel the fair budgeteer with hints of almost everything a woman has to know to be a successful homemaker—at a price.

In "Lucky Night," Myrna and Bob have to make out on $35 a week, and that is much more than many couples have to get along on. How would you budget your home on a $35 income?

There is a first prize of $15 in cash awaiting the best home budget balancer, with two runner-up prizes of $10 and $5, respectively. Manager Eddie Pentecost, of Loew's, is further adding 15 pairs of tickets to see how Hollywood figures it out in "Lucky Night." This is your last chance to submit your $35 ideal budget, for this fascinating contest. All entries must be on the Budget Editor's desk not later than 12:30 this afternoon. Prize winners will be announced tomorrow.

Woman's Quiz
Q. Which foods are good sources of iodine?
A. Shell fish, particularly oysters, clams and lobsters.
Q. What is the average weight and height of baby boys 10 months old?
A. Height 28 1-2 inches, weight 20 7-8 pounds.
Q. Can you suggest a dressing that can easily be made at home, to be used on hair, something on the order of brilliantine?
A. A desired perfume to a lightweight mineral or vegetable oil. White vaseline can also be added.

Have you a household problem to solve? Write your question clearly, sign your name and address, enclose a three-cent postage stamp and mail to the Woman's Quiz of the Constitution's Washington Service Bureau, 1015 15th street, Washington, D. C. For a reply. Three of the most interesting answers will be printed here daily. Don't telephone write as directed.

TODAY'S CHARM TIP
Don't blame Fate or become bitter and cynical because of so-called "raw deals." Better to look into one's own inadequacies, as here often is found the real clue to the charges against fate.

Frill-Trimmed Frocks by Barbara Bell
Here's another proof that the simplest things are the best! Could anything be more utterly charming than this princess frock (1752-B) with square neckline and the flattering froth of frills? It has everything the mode insists upon—a tiny waist, wide shoulders, decided femininity and a touch of white! And it's such an easy dress to make that even the inexperienced can do it with no difficulty. The pattern includes a detailed sew chart.

This is a beautifully adaptable style too—pretty with both big and little hats perfect for street wear, and slim enough to make your fitted coats look particularly well. Make it of taffeta, flat crepe, silk print and, for warmer weather, linen or ginghams.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1752-B is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Corresponding bust measurements 30, 32,

Edward F. McGrady, former assistant secretary of labor, in an address before the ninth annual conference of United States mayors.

Needed, he said, was "machinery that will operate immediately, sympathetically and effectively."

"The way to do this is first endeavor to prevent strikes through conciliation and, second, if a stoppage of work does occur, do your utmost to curtail its duration by personal effort."

Labor, he added, "must not forget that management is seeking to sell its goods under the keenest of competition and is harassed by many problems which labor knows little about."

All officers of the mayors' conference were re-elected—president, La Guardia, of New York; vice president, Kelly, of Chicago; treasurer, Jackson, of Baltimore; trustees, Burton, of Cleveland; Overton, of Memphis; Rossi, of San Francisco, and Rogers, of Amarillo, Texas.

A time table for each man drawing a dose so he will not need to wait in line has been made by the Labor Exchange in Torne, England.

'Paul Revere' of Confederacy Recalls Ride To Warn Of Sherman's March as She Marks 84th Birthday

Atlanta Woman Played Role in Civil War When Nine Years Old.

A gray-haired Atlanta woman who as a girl played the role of Paul Revere during Sherman's historic march, through Georgia celebrated her 84th birthday yesterday.

That nine-year-old girl, who today is Mrs. Thomas Jefferson Lockridge, of 556 North Highland avenue, N. E., never reached her destination when she and her 11-year-old sister jumped on their horses and started galloping madly across the country to broadcast the warning that Cassville was to be burned by Sherman. She fell from her horse and broke her arm, but the message got through.

Sitting at home yesterday with her Bible, flowers and crocheting grouped around her, Mrs. Lockridge, who is the widow of T. J. Lockridge Sr., former prominent Atlanta realtor, recalled the experience vividly and her eyes sparkled as she recounted the spine-tingling events.

When Sherman began his march through Georgia in 1864, Mrs. Lockridge was living on her father's plantation, three miles from Cassville, in Bartow county.

"On the day before Cassville was burned a neighbor rode to our home and called to my mother, telling her to send word to my father who had gone to the blacksmith shop to go to Cassville and move my Sister Susan, wife of Major John Loudermilk, and two small boys out to our home, as Sherman would surely burn Cassville that night," she said. "Major Loudermilk was away at the front and later was killed in action."

Saddled Two Horses.
"My mother had no one to send except my sister, Betty, 11, and me, 9. So she saddled two horses and placed us on them. My father owned many horses before the war and we all were taught to ride when quite young."

"My mother, not accustomed to saddling horses, did not get the saddle fastened securely on my horse and after a couple of miles the saddle turned and I fell off, breaking my arm between the elbow and shoulder. My sister placed me under a tree on the side of the road and went on for my father."

Never Fully Recovered.
Mrs. Lockridge said her father, later coming by and finding her, split some hickory saplings for stays, stretched her arm straight and bound the stays with his suspenders. A week passed before a doctor could be obtained and she has never fully recovered from the injury.
"While I was in bed," she continued, "three Yankee soldiers came to our home and asked my father for all his money and became angry when he told them he had none, so they, thinking my arm was a ruse and that money and jewelry were hidden under my mattress, took the shovel from the hearth and threw red coals on my bed. When I jumped out of bed they ran their bayonets into the mattress."

Run Yankees Out.
When the soldiers threatened to hang her father and pushed her pleading mother away, Mrs. Lockridge said her 18-year-old sister, Mildred, and Mrs. Loudermilk, picked up pine knots and ran the Yankees out of the house.
A member of a large family, Mrs. Lockridge said she had five brothers in the Confederate army as well as several uncles and cousins.

Her eyes sparkling with excitement, Mrs. Thomas Jefferson Lockridge, of 556 North Highland avenue, N. E., relived the hectic days of the War Between the States yesterday as she celebrated her 84th birthday. With her Bible, flowers and crocheting grouped around, she tells of the time she raced across the country on a horse to broadcast a warning that Sherman was planning to burn Cassville.

ins. Her father served in the Mexican War of 1845 but was too feeble to fight for the Confederacy.

Staunch Baptist.
Still active, Mrs. Lockridge spends most of her time listening to the radio and crocheting. She has been a staunch Baptist throughout her life and was teacher of the Bible class in the East End Baptist church for many years. She takes a great interest in current events and is a supporter of President Roosevelt and Governor Rivers.

Mrs. Lockridge, who has lived in Atlanta for the past 48 years, is the mother of T. J. Lockridge Jr., the late Charles J. Lockridge, who for 25 years was connected with The Constitution; Mrs. Forrest Kibler and Mrs. Harvey Weatherly, both of Atlanta; Mrs. Frederick Rice, of Decatur, and Mrs. Oliver Layton, of Tampa, Florida.

INTENT TO MURDER HIS CHILD CHARGED

Sheriff Says Girl, 9, Found Unconscious.

CULLMAN, Ala., May 17.—(P)—Nine-year-old Flora May Gill was in the hospital here today, seriously injured, while Sheriff J. D. Mitchell said he had charged her father, Otis Gill, with assault with intent to murder.

Mitchell said the child, reportedly missing since Monday by her father, was found unconscious in the barn loft at the Gill home. She had been severely beaten, the sheriff said. Previous searches had been denied access to the barn by Gill, 48-year-old farmer.

Flora May had regained consciousness, the sheriff said, but was not yet able to talk with him. Mitchell reported the child's mother died seven or eight years ago, and Gill, since remarried, has a three-week-old baby by his second wife.
